RICE SHOPS TURN DEAF EAR TO NEW PRICE LIMIT

Guild's Prohibition Of Sale Of Cereal Above $14 Is Ignored

COUNCIL MOVES

Forbids Hoarding And Invites Report On Profiteering

SHOPS GOING OUT

Fear Of Being Caught By Government Rules Prompts Suspension

It was reported late last night that 178,000 piculs of rice was found sequestered in the French Concession by the police. Inquiries at the various bureaus and stations failed to confirm the report.

Despite the rigid rules laid down by their own guild, placing the maximum price of rice at $14 per picul, shopkeepers continued to sell their cereal at $16 per picul yesterday, the first day that the new rule, as authorised by the Rice Guild, was supposed to be put into force.

Rice-shop proprietors declared that their cost was about $15.50 and that they were forced to sell their goods at that figure. If the new ruling of the guild is to be enforced, they said, it will force them out of business. Some have already closed up shop, for fear that they might be caught by some government regulation temporarily forcing down the price, and thus be compelled to stand the full weight of the loss themselves.

THE $14 LIMIT

The Rice Guild late Tuesday passed a resolution, making the $14 figure the maximum price for first-class rice, and drafted regulations for the punishment of any dealer who might violate the rule. The punishment that the offender would receive, according to the decision, was the confiscation of the entire quantity of goods which he had attempted to sell over and above the standard price.

A vigilance committee was appointed to look out for profiteering. The new regulations were promulgated by the city authorities yesterday, but it is doubtful whether they will be observed seriously, in view of the cool reception they got yesterday.

FEW OBEYED ORDERS

A few shops in Nantao and Chapei sold small quantities of goods at the standard price early in the morning, in deference to the new order of the guild of which they are members. But when they learned that none of the Settlement stores had carried out the rule, they put the price back to the high mark.

The Shanghai Municipal Council issued yesterday a lengthy proclamation in Chinese, forbidding hoarding and inviting reports at the Central Police Station regarding any one who is thought to be engaged in profiteering. The message stated that the jump in the price of rice has caused a great deal of unrest; and that, no doubt, certain undesirables are reaping a harvest of profit by hoarding large quantities of the cereal.

After pointing out the seriousness of the situation caused by these undesirables the Council extended a general invitation to the public to report any case of profiteering or hoarding to the Central Police Station, which will give each individual case thorough investigation. The offender, it says, will be punished with the full rigidity of the law.

TWELVE MORE DEPOTS

The City Magistrate, Mr. Shen Tsu-chang, held another conference with the members of the gentry of the various districts yesterday. As a result, the city treasury will be ordered to advance $12,000 for the purpose of establishing a dozen cheap exchanges in the same number of districts where no such depots yet exist.

The Nanyang Brothers Tobacco Company yesterday completed

American Minister's U.S. Home To Be "Summer White House"

Dining room of Summer "White House." INTERNATIONAL.

The beautiful "home-side" residence of the American Minister to China, Charles R. Crane, has been selected from a number offered to President Wilson, to be used as the "Summer White House" this year.

The Crane mansion is located at Woods' Hole, Massachusetts, a beautiful spot near the sea-shore. From here President Wilson will probably direct the Democratic campaign, providing his health continues to improve.

The photographs show glimpses of the dining-room and reception in the Crane house; which, without being ornate, is said to be a triumph of quiet good taste.

DUTY OF WORLD TO RECONSTRUCT

"German Rockefeller" Tells How Nations Should Again Combine

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 29.—In an interview, published in the Matin today, Herr Hugo Stinnes, whom the journal describes as the "German Rockefeller," declared that it was the duty of everyone, victors and vanquished alike, to produce, to create values to replace the values that had disappeared.

"I hear it said," Herr Stinnes continued, "that the outline of this work will be begun at Spa. If the Spa Conference realises the situation, I believe that International solidarity, financial and economic, may be achieved—for too high a rate of exchange is as heavy a burden as too low a rate.

FORCE AMERICA IN

"This situation will compel the neutrals and America to take part in the reconstruction of Europe. But the essential basis of the general rearrangement is that Franco-German solidarity is rendered necessary by geographical contiguity, by the war, by the exchange of foodstuffs, coal and various other products.

"Intensive trade could be developed between us, once the Rhine and Moselle are made completely navigable. The hydraulic power derived therefrom could and should be completely under French control."

President Asked To Convene League

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, June 27.—The Allies have asked President Wilson to call the first meeting of the Assembly of the League of Nations.

Officials there state that the call will not be issued immediately as the time and place of the meeting have not yet been decided. Some favor Geneva and others Brussels.

Canada Accepts Bolshevik Contracts

(Reuter's Service)

New York, June 26.—Martens, the Bolshevik envoy, is reported to have signed a contract for several million dollars for Canadian food stuffs and machinery for Russia.

It is stated that special bank arrangements have been made in Canada and England. The first shipment, it is understood, will be flour.

Inadequate Transportation Plus Inefficiency Of Labor, Hence Curtailed Production

Leaders Of American Industry Deny Any Slackening Up Policy Of Manufacturers—Tinplate Making So Hampered That Canning Season Finds Hall To Quarter Of Containers Available—Farmers Will Not Plant With Waste Thus Assured—Motor Car Production Drops 35 Percent

Lack of transporation facilities and decreasing efficiency of labor are given as the chief reasons for the curtailment in production and the laying off of workers throughout the country by those leaders of industry who are willing to admit any general slacking up by manufacturers. Recent statements to The New York World show:

A critical condition in the hardware industry, with thousands of men out of work.

The tinplate industry so handicapped that the canning season will find available only one-half and possibly one-quarter of the cans needed for putting up food. For this reason it is predicted farmers will not plant the usual vegetables for canning.

A dropping off of 35 percent in motor car production.

Woman's garment industry virtually at a standstill.

To offset this gloomy view leaders in iron and steel production deny any likelihood of a shutdown.

NOT OPTIMISTIC

S. H. Gardner of the American Hardware Manufacturers' Association, was less optimistic than any other of the business men interviewed. He saw as the cause of curtailment in production, which he says has hurt the hardware industry, not only inadequate transporation facilities, but the unwillingness of workers to produce as in years before 1916.

"Despite double wages, workers are only 60 percent efficient," said Mr. Gardner, "and this inefficiency will continue until the workingman feels the pinch is bound to come with the cold weather.

"The situation in the hardware industry is critical. There has been stoppage of work all over the country. It would be difficult to say how many men employed in hardware factories are out of work, but in Cleveland 17,000 men are idle, our reports show. Just the other day one company, the name of which I cannot give out, laid off 2,500 men.

CANNOT GET MATERIAL

"The members of our association complain bitterly about transporation conditions. They cannot get raw materials to the factories and they cannot ship the finished product. Great sums of money are tied up and credit is strained. It is a very serious condition.

"In some cases where there have been strikes there has been no out-put of raw material even.

"The workingman will pay for this condition. It all reverts to the laboring people themselves. The conditions in the tinplate industry presage a calamity which reaches clear back to the soil. From information I have gathered I feel safe in predicting that when the canning season starts there will not be enough cans to meet one-half of the normal demand. I fear there will not be one-quarter of the cans usually needed.

FARMER'S WON'T PLANT

"What does this mean? The farmer, knowing actual facts, will refuse to plant. He certainly cannot afford to have vegetables ordinarily put up for the winter go to waste on his land.

"One manufacturer recently told me he had $7,000,000 worth of

NEW REICHSTAG OPENS SESSION; LEADER ADMITS GERMAN PLIGHT

Chancellor Fehrenbach Makes Appeal To The World To Resume Relations

MUST END REACTION

"The More Sympathy We Get Fewer Dreams Of Revenge," He Frankly Admits

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, June 28.—The new Reichstag met today. The Chancellor, Herr Fehrenbach, in his opening address, speaking of foreign policy, said that Germans scarcely recognised the heavy burden that the treaty of Versailles really was.

The German Government, he said, had no alternative but to try to fulfil their engagements. Germany must carry out the disarmament and reparation clauses of the treaty. If they were not all executed, this would not be due to want of good will.

APPEALS FOR FAITH

The Chancellor went on to appeal to the mutual confidence of nations to resume the economic development which had been arrested by the war.

"We consider our principal task," he said, "to be to end the fatal reaction which is the result of the mistrust of our opponents, and of our own failure to carry out the peace conditions, by convincing our former opponents that the more the German people's meet with sympathy, the less foundation do the dreams of political might or thoughts of revenge find among them.

"Germany must also convince her opponents that every good German recognises that the one and only rallying cry is 'reconstruct in tranquility what the war destroyed.'"

TURKEY OFFERS TREATY REVISIONS

Asks Neutral Zone, Plebiscite In Smyrna And Representation On Boards

(Reuter's Service)

Constantinople, June 27.—The Turkish counter proposals to the Peace Treaty suggest the establishment of a neutral zone in Thrace; a plebiscite for Smyrna; the creation of a corridor to Brussa through the international zone, enabling the Sultan to reach his dominions without crossing foreign ground; and the inclusion of a Turkish delegate, with equal powers, on the commission of financial control.

The news of the Greek advance has caused the most profound dismay everywhere in Turkey.

"The Greek campaign against the Nationalists forestalled an offensive for which Mustapha Kemal Pasha was concentrating his troops against the Greeks."

BATTALIONS POUR ACROSS TO ERIN

Trouble Feared At Belfast; Sinn Feiners Kidnap Brigadier General

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 28.—A deputation, headed by Sir Edward Carson, called on the Prime Minister today to draw attention to the likelihood of trouble at Belfast.

Mr. Lloyd George, in reply, stated that a battalion had just arrived at Belfast, another was going there immediately, and a third had received orders to leave.

STEAL A GENERAL

London, June 28.—Sinn Feiners captured Brigadier-General C. H. T. Luces and two other officers at Fermoy yesterday. The other officers have returned to Fermoy but the whereabouts of General Lucas is unknown.

Later.—Brigadier-General Lucas's two companions were Colonels Danford and Tyrrell. The party were surprised at night in a fishing-hut by armed men in a motor-car, who seized and carried off the officers.

Colonel Danford jumped from the car and attempted to escape. He was fired upon and wounded in the head and Colonel Tyrrell was then left behind to attend him.

RICE SHOP RAID IN CARTER ROAD; POLICE ON JOB

The first raid on a Seglement rice shop took place yesterday. Between 200 and 300 coolies and other paupers attempted to raid the Chin Zung Rice Shop at 620 Carter Road shortly after 7 o'clock last night.

The shop immediately put up its shutters and the gang began breaking the doors. Bubbling Well Road police soon appeared and dispersed the crowd, after arresting two of the ringleaders, who will be charged this morning in the Mixed Court.

CHINESE STOCK EXCHANGE TO BE OPENED TODAY

Inauguration Ceremonies To Continue Throughout Business Hours

The inauguration ceremony of the Chartered Stock and Produce Exchange, Shanghai, Ltd., corner Avenue Edward VII and Szechuen Road, will take place today. A reception to local officials, bankers, the press and friends of the new enterprise will be given between 9 o'clock in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Beginning at 9 o'clock, a program of inauguration will be held at which Mr. Yu Yah-ching, managing director of the exchange, will officiate.

The exchange is capitalised at $5,000,000, of which one-fourth has already been paid-up. For the present it will confine its activities in cotton, yarn, provisions and shares. More than 70 hongs are interested in the enterprise. It expects to deal in piece goods, gold and silver bullion, bristle and fur and hide in the near future.

The exchange is conducted under four departments: the department of general administration, the according department, the clearance department and the department of market affairs. It is backed by some of the most influential Chinese merchants in Shanghai.

Included on the board of directors are some of the best-known merchants in cotton, yarn, provisions and good and silver.

ITALIAN TROOPS REVOLT; RETURN

Battalion Of Bersaglieri, At Ancona, Mutiny; Then Change Their Minds

(Reuter's Service)

Rome, June 27.—As the result of revolutionary propaganda, a battalion of Bersaglieri mutinied at Ancona yesterday, arrested their officers and entrenched themselves in the barrack grounds with armored cars.

The loyal garrison surrounded the barracks and is counter-entrenching. The town is in a state of panic. Houses have been barricaded and martial law has been proclaimed.

ORDER RESTORED

Ancona, June 27.—The mutinous Bersaglieri have surrendered to their Commander. Reinforcements are on their way to Ancona and order is being rapidly restored.

SIX ARE KILLED

Ancona, June 28.—A general strike has been declared in the neighboring villages. Trains were attacked yesterday at Borzaccio and five passengers and a policeman killed. Anarchists with a machine-gun attacked the Carabinieri barracks in Ancona, bombing the gates but they were unable to enter.

Military reinforcements on their arrival at Ancona were received with a fusillade from the houses in which women participated.

Kobe Declared Infected Port

The Superintendent of Customs and the treaty power consuls in Shanghai have declared the port of Kobe to be cholera-infected, according to the notification of the Harbor Master.

All vessels arriving from that port will be governed by the sanitary regulations of Shanghai.

JAPAN CANNOT ACCEPT SOVIET RULE IN EAST, SAYS GENERAL

Would, However, Negotiate With Verdhne-Udinsk On Conditions

FOR "BUFFER STATE"

Hostilities Must Cease And Semenoff Be Considered In Proceedings

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, June 29.—General Oi, Japanese commander-in-chief in Siberia has sent the following communication to the Verdhne-Udinsk Government:

"With reference to the possibility mentioned in your telegram of May 31 (in reply to mine of May 11) of the formation of a buffer State, independent of Soviet Russia, this proposal is satisfactory. Nevertheless, although the Soviets may recognise the buffer State, we cannot recognise your government as solidly or legally established, and the same applies to the Amur Government. It is therefore our desire to negotiate with Verdhne-Udinsk on the basis of the following conditions:

WAR MUST STOP

"(1) Hostilities on all fronts must cease and every Government in the Far East must spare its inhabitants the horrors of warfare: then and not till then can the question of all the Far Eastern Governments forming a buffer State be discussed.

"(2) We cannot treat Semenoff and his men as a band of robbers. We consider him as also representing one of the Far Eastern Governments and consequently in discussing the formation of a buffer State, Semenoff must be taken into account. If the desire to exclude Semenoff really exists, the Governments of the Far East must jointly decide this question.

OBSERVE NEUTRALITY

"Your statement that neutrality must be observed by Semenoff and the Japanese troops coincides with my wishes. Nevertheless your troops, aided by the Zabaikal Soviets, attacked the Japanese. Since the fall of Kolchak the Soviet army has frequently attacked the Allies and the possibility exists that Verdhne-Udinsk may attack us. That is why we wish to bring hostilities to a close between the Japanese and Verdhne Udinsk while recognising Semenoff, who is maintaining order in Zabaikal.

"I do not doubt that Verdhne-Udinsk desires peace in the Far East and I hope and anticipate that you will agree to the foregoing proposals. Please accept my best wishes."

JAP MISCREANT EXPLODES BOMB NEAR PARLIAMENT

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 29.—A bomb was exploded tonight in front of the House of Representatives. The explosion was terrific but no damage was done to the Diet buildings, although the windows of the buildings opposite were smashed.

There were many members in the Diet Building when the explosion occurred. There was great excitement but nobody was hurt.

The author of the outrage is not known.

Rail Situation "Menacing," Says Labor Conference

(Reuter's Service)

Chicago, June 26.—The heads of fifteen railway labor organisations at a conference yesterday declared that the railway situation had been most menacing since the war and that they doubted whether it would be possible to prevent the complete paralysis of transportation unless the wages controversy were promptly decided.

Washington, June 26.—President Wilson has accepted the resignation of Major Benedict Crowell, Assistant Secretary of War.

PRO-WILSON FORCES WIN POINTS AT CONVENTION

Gain Control Of Platform Committee; Bryan Is Outmaneuvered

CAUCUS OPENED

Chairman Cummings, In Brilliant Speech, Lauds The President

FIGHT ON PLANK

Treaty, League, Labor, Suffrage And Liquor Are Debate Subjects

(Special to THE CHINA PRESS)

San Francisco, June 28.—The Democratic National Convention was formally opened in the Civic Auditorium here at noon today.

President Wilson scored an impressive point in the initial clash of ballots when his representatives in the convention secured control of the resolutions committee.

William J. Bryan, leading the opposition against the Wilson policies, failed to secure a place on the platform committee.

The Irish question, Prohibition, the labor situation and woman's suffrage promise to be prominent among the points at issue in the prospective three-day battle over the planks to be adopted.

The Peace Treaty and the League of Nations, however, will naturally take precedence over all other issues, and around them the fury of the conflict will undoubtedly rage.

Adoption of the Treaty and League as they stand; adoption with reservation; and even repudiation are sure to be subjects of debate before the Democratic platform of 1920 is formally adopted.

CENTER ON PLATFORM

Talk of the chances of probable candidates languishes for the moment, attention being centered on the debate over what national principles shall or shall not be espoused.

Former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Love definitely announced today that William Gibbs McAdoo, former Director-General of Railroads, will accept the nomination if it is tendered to him.

A movement has been started to unite all the delegates, favoring the nomination of Mr. McAdoo. It is believed that his adherents will await the expected deadlock between the candidatures of Mr. Palmer and Mr. Cox and then submit the name of Mr. McAdoo as a compromise choice.

Secretary of Agriculture E. T. Meredith is being somewhat generally announced as the choice of many delegates for the office of Vice-President.

WILSON MEN WIN

Carter Glass of Virginia has been selected as chairman of the resolutions committee and Senator Robinson of Arkansas, another strong Wilson man, has been made permanent chairman.

Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby has been recognised as the leader of the pro-Wilson forces in the convention.

Homer S. Cummings, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, in a brilliant and forceful opening address to the delegates, sounded the keynote of the party leaders, paying a high tribute to President Wilson; upholding the League—which he described as "a Monroe Doctrine for the world"—and condemning the recently-adopted Republican platform as "reactionary" and "vague."

Mr. Burleson, in a speech today, explaining the policy of the "Wets," urged an amendment to the Constitution, requiring that future amendments to the Constitution should be ratified or rejected by referendum votes of the States and throughout the Union.

The Illinois delegation rejected a resolution favoring the exclusion of any reference to prohibition in the Democratic platform, and afterwards accepted, by 58 votes to 21, a declaration permitting the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer.

The split between the supporters of President Wilson and Mr. Bryan is becoming increasingly bitter, especially with regard to the League of Nations. President Wilson's supporters insist on a complete endorsement of his policy, while Mr. Bryan's supporters desire a compromise with the Senate with regard to the League.

LABOR WANTS ACTION

Delegate Love, representing the McAdoo forces, announced the receipt of a telegram from the American Federation of Labor, asking that the convention oppose all reactionary tendencies.

This is understood to mean that Labor stands solidly for the Treaty and League, without reservations.

REUTER'S REPORT

San Francisco, June 29.—Senator Carter Glass (Virginia) was today unanimously chosen chairman of the resolutions committee, which will draft the platform. Senator Joe T. Robinson (Arkansas) was chosen permanent chairman of the convention.

The selection of these two admittedly pro-Administration men demonstrates that the Administration forces are in complete control of the machinery of the convention.

Any planks, proposed by Mr. Bryan and others, which fail to secure the approval of the resolutions committee, must be brought on to the floor of the convention, where Senator Robinson will be wielding the gavel when any attacks are made on the Administration's program.

BRYAN ELIMINATED

Still another indication of the strength of the Administration was the elimination of Mr. Bryan from the sub-committee appointed by Senator Glass to draft the platform, and the appointment thereon of Mr. Bainbridge Colby, the Secretary of State, who admittedly represents President Wilson's views on the League of Nations' plank.

Senator Robinson, in the course of his speech as permanent chairman, assailed the Republican program, particularly the Mexican plank. He attacked the Republican Senators who had fought the ratification of the Treaty, and placed the burden of the blame for the unpreparedness of the United States for war on the Republicans.

G.O.P. "DISHONEST"

Mr. Cummings in his address, paid a tribute to the Government's course of action during the war. He declared that the Republican plank with regard to the League of Nations was "dishonest," and arraigned the United States for not fulfilling its pledges to Europe.

The national chairman, in conclusion, urged America to support the Democratic Party's policy of "peace, disarmament and world fraternity."

Replying to the Republican argument that Great Britain would have six votes to the United States' one, he declared that, with Liberia and the West Indian and Central American countries all bound by ties of mutual interest, if not directly under American tutelage, the United States would have more votes than any other nation.

PRESIDENT "HEART-SICK"

Mr. Cummings said that President Wilson was not only broken in body but heart-sick from the knowledge that his political adversaries were savagely attempting to destroy the world's hope of settled peace.

Every mention of the League of Nations in the chairman's speech was greeted with prolonged cheers by the convention which afterwards adopted with enthusiasm a resolution that a message of cheer and admiration should be sent to President Wilson as the leader of the Party, regretting the attacks upon him of his party foes and congratulating him upon his restoration to bodily health.

After having completed the organisation for the convention the sitting was adjourned until tomorrow.

COMMITTEES BEGIN

After the adjournment the committees, charged with the drawing up of the platform, the decision of contested seats and the formation of a permanent organisation, met and began the real work of the convention. Opinions vary as to how long it will take to reach an agreement, what with Mr. Bryan urging a prohibition plank, Mr. Gompers a Labor plank and De Valera an Irish plank.

The distracted committeemen are of opinion that it may require two or three days to finish the platform.

IRISH WITHDRAW

San Francisco, June 26.—The representatives of the organisation, "The Friends of Irish Freedom," which intended to urge a plank to the Democratic platform, have decided to abandon the idea in view of the activities of De Valera and the Irish "sympathisers."

The announcement is regarded as aggravating the possibility of a determined fight on the Irish question.

The credentials committee has rejected Senator Reed's claim to serve as delegate for Missouri. Senator Reed is a conspicuous opponent of President Wilson's policies.

WILSON ACCLAIMED

San Francisco, June 28.—A feature of the opening ceremony of the Democratic Convention was the display of an enormous American flag and then of the portrait of President Wilson, the latter causing a wild demonstration which lasted for half an hour. Numbers of delegates, carrying banners, paraded the hall, cheering and singing. During the keynote speech the very mention of President Wilson's leadership was received with enthusiastic acclamation, in spite of Mr. Cummings' repeated requests for silence.

PLATFORM FIRST

San Francisco, June 29.—The rules committee of the Democratic convention has decided that nomination speeches may be made before the party platform has been presented; but that balloting for candidates shall not take place until the platform has been adopted.

Sunkiang Notes

(China Press Correspondence)

Sungkiang, June 29.—The Lauh Ung Daung Epworth League has, through the past winter and spring, been conducting a night school in English. Last Friday night they had their exercises and the students who took part showed that they had made good progress in their English work. Each student was presented with a certificate stating the work done. This night school will be opened again in September and a large attendence is expected.

Mr. Burke, who came to Sungkiang as a missionary over thirty years ago, leaves on the Empress of Asia this week to spend his fourth furlough in America. Miss Drake leaves on the same vessel to take her second furlough.

The people of Sungkiang have lately been making some splendid moves. There is a movement on foot to clean up the streets and, in all probability, it will materialise into something worth while.

Last week several of the head men of Sungkiang met and considered raising the salaries of the school teachers in the city. At the present cost of rice we are sure this will be appreciated by the teachers.

The rice situation in Sungkiang is no better and there seems to be little chance of it getting better for some time. The business men have some plan on foot to get rice to supply the demand, but this may take some time. In the meantime some fear trouble. Others seem to think there is no immediate danger. Rice is quoted here at about twelve dollars.

Christian Soldier Burns 160,067 Ozs Of Opium Publicly

(China Press Correspondence)

Changteh, Hunan, June 30.—General Feng Yu-hsiang, the Christian division commander in command of the Northern troops here, today consigned to the flames 160,067 ounces of opium in public. The drug consisted of confiscated opium seized by the police from traffickers and smokers for the last several months.

General Feng was yesterday decorated with the Second Class Chiaho with the Grand Cordon by the Peking administration in recognition of his services.

Jap Civic Bodies Score California

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 29.—A joint meeting of Japanese Chambers of Commerce yesterday adopted a resolution drawing public attention to the anti-Japanese movement in California; which, the resolution declared, was "threatening to frustrate all Japanese efforts toward self-development there." The resolution added:

"It is highly desirable to unite in an effort to secure a peaceful settlement of the difficulty, with a view to the realisation of a thorough international understanding."

Gould Daughter Third Member Of Family To Elope

Miss Edith C. Gould, beautiful eighteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, eloped recently with Carroll L. Wainwright, twenty, Yale undergraduate and son of Mrs. Carl F. Wolff of New York City. Miss Gould is the third member of the millionaire family to elope. Her brothers Kingdon and George Jay, Jr., were married within a few days of each other in 1914, causing a stir in society and separating themselves for a period from the bosom of their family.

Inadequate Transportation Plus Inefficiency Of Labor

cans which he cannot move. So long as his money is tied up in these cans he cannot afford to manufacture more. In a case like that it is necessary to lay off workmen.

"Hardware manufacturers are from four to six months behind in their orders. In some cases they are a year behind, and all because they cannot get raw material or get efficiency from labor.

LACK OF LABOR

"Also there is a woeful lack of unskilled workers. This is due largely to immigration conditions. More than 60 percent of immigrants are women. Every country in Europe has placed restrictions upon emigration of men. Foreign nations realise the need of preserving man power.

"The reason for the inadequate transportation is that the railroads are not getting enough pay for freight and therefore cannot afford to buy additional rolling stock."

Mr. Gardner took a fling at the excess profits tax, saying it takes double the capital to manufacture now than it did before the war. He also said he thought it was nonsense to blame conditions on Presidential politics.

"The only solution of the high cost of living problem is to make the workingman feel the pinch," Mr. Gardner said in conclusion.

TAKES OTHER SIDE

J. H. Tregoe, Secretary and Treasurer of the National Association of Credit Men, took a somewhat different view of the matter.

"It is quite true that transportation conditions are bad," said Mr. Tregoe. "However, now that the manufacturers are suffering from lack of transportation facilities to such an extent that they even are crying for an increase in freight rates if that is necessary to obtain additional rolling stock, one recalls that it wasn't so very long ago that these same manufacturers were opposed to any increase.

"The whole truth of the matter is that all of us have been living without a thought for tomorrow. There is not a thing the matter with this country. The fault is with ourselves, all of us.

"I TOLD YOU SO!"

"Industries have absorbed too much liquid capital. Ever since the war started we, the credit men, have been clamoring for the building up of the human morale of the nation instead of the machine.

"The present conditions are what we call 'frozen credit.' The settlement of the transportation problem is a crying need and goes back to the very vitals of credit. And here's a point that comes up when attention is called to the fact that not enough cars are available. As a result of this shortage we have a 'ship by truck movement,' with the result that our highways, and especially the main thoroughfares, are broken down by truck trains and have become an added expense to the various States.

"All along the credit men have been sounding a warning to provide a financial reserve against the day of adjustment. Those who did not heed must pay the piper. Most of us are suffering from credit indigestion, and for that reason we must starve ourselves for awhile."

THE AUTO CRISIS

Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, had just returned from a tour of the motor car manufacturing centers when he was asked about the report that there had been or was about to be curtailment of 50 percent in automobile production for the purpose of stabilising industrial and labor conditions because prices had reached the peak. He said:

"Prices are fixed at the factories and there is no profiteering in the automobile industry less than 10 percent being the usual profit. Motorcar manufacturers are anxious and always have been anxious to speed production. It is an open shop business and so labor is bound to be competitive. Wages always have been high, by comparison, and only when the manufacturers have been unable to get parts or the parts makers have been unable to get raw material has there been any let up in production.

"That condition does exist at present, but not to the extent that there is or is likely to be a 50 percent curtailment.

"However, motor car production during the past 30 days has dropped very substantially, production being about 65 percent of normal. It looks to me as though this will be the best the manufacturers can do for some time to come."

June Fire Report Given In Gazette

The fire brigade's report for June is given in the current number of the Municipal Gazette in part as follows:

The total number of calls to fires, or supposed fires, during the month was 21, as against 32 for the corresponding month last year. The damage on assessed property within the Settlement is estimated at Tls. 11,600 (Foreign Tls. nil: Chinese Tls. 11,600), as against Tls. 71,075 (Foreign Tls. 65,025: Chinese Tls. 6,050) during May, 1919.

The property at risk is estimated at Tls. 213,000 (Foreign Tls. 25,000: Chinese Tls. 188,000), as against Tls. 593,000 (Foreign Tls. 425,000: Chinese Tls. 165,000) for the corresponding period last year.

There was a case of arson during the month, action was taken in the Mixed Court, two employes received sentences of 5 years each and another employe one year.

Japanese Re-elect Officers Of Diet

WAITED 22 YEARS ONLY TO BE JILTED

Now A Jury Has Awarded Miss Fellers Damages At Rate Of $1,000 A Year

Falls City, Neb., May 22.—A Richardson County jury has awarded $1,000 a year to Miss Jennie Fellers for each of the twenty-two years she waited for Louis H. Howe, now of Lincoln, to make good his promise to marry her.

Miss Fellers is a school teacher. Her story was that when she was a high school girl in 1896 she met Howe, several years her senior and of a family possessed of large holdings of land. Howe was manager of the estate for his mother. Miss Fellers agreed to marry him but he said he must stay with his mother as long as she lived. Meanwhile he showered gifts and attentions upon the young woman.

Howe's mother is still living. In 1913 Howe broke off the engagement. He said that his mother and sisters did not think Miss Fellers would make him the kind of a wife he needed. He also said his fiancee had grown "touchy" and "sharp" in her conversations with him. She sued for $50,000. The jury gave her $22,000.

Peace Jurists Urge Quick League Action

The Hague, June 28.—The advisory committee of jurists under the League of Nations has urged that a provision be made for purely legal cases to go automatically before the Court of International Justice.

The committee suggests that the immediate summons of an international conference should be recommended to the Council of the League of Nations, in order to restate the principles of international law.

The committee also agrees that the Court of International Justice should be open to all cases needing arbitration, even from States which are not members of the League.

Report Criticises Armament Of S. V. C.

Strong recommendation that armament and equipment of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps be modernised is made in the official report of Lieut.-Col. J. R. Wyndham, 2nd Bn. The Wiltshire Regiment, who recently conducted an inspection of the corps.

"The great handicap to its efficiency," says the officer's report concerning the corps, "is the obsolete nature of its arms and equipment.

"I strongly recommend that both armament and equipment be brought up to date and that a proportion of Lewis guns, say 2 percent per Company, be issued to each infantry company."

The full report is given in the current Municipal Gazette.

Street Unions Won't Pay Any Stamp Tax

The Federated Street Unions yesterday passed a resolution opposing the exaction of the stamp tax in the International Settlement. The meeting set forth four grounds why the new assessment should not be tolerated. They are:

1.—Discrimination against Chinese, because the foreigner in the Settlement will be exempted from this liability.

2.—Unnecessary burden, because the taxpayer receives no benefit from the liability.

3.—The present difficulties caused by the exchange, and economic depression.

4.—Chinese have no means of supervising the national finance under the present circumstances.

Britain Considers Ex-Service Bureau

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 28.—The Daily Express publishes the outline of an elaborate scheme to establish a "King's House" memorial to the fallen in the war. The scheme consists in the establishment of a vast bureau in one of the new Government buildings in Westminster to assist and advice ex-service men. The scheme will be run on a business basis. The King in person assisted at the Council.

K. C. Toy Shop Soothes Shattered Nerves Of Shell-Shock Victims

In an effort to save the shattered nerves of shell-shocked victims of the World War, the Knights of Columbus war organisation has opened a toy shop at the St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Washington, D. C. There, under the personal direction of Jim Kelly, a veteran of the war and winner of the D. S. C., the shell-shock victims are taught the art of making toys. According to the hospital authorities the interesting work has greatly aided many of the soldiers. The photograph shows Jim Kelly (left) instructing one of the hospital inmates in toy-making.

Saving Through Science

Chief Physicist Of The Bureau Of Standards Urges More Research As A Remedy For Our Economic Ills

A way to attack the question of the high cost of necessities of life through the increase of efficiency both on the part of the Government and the industry of the country, is presented by the Chief Physicist of the Government's Bureau of Standards, Dr. Edward B. Rosa. This increase of efficiency could be brought about, Dr. Rosa says, through extending the research and educational facilities of the National Government. How little that work amounts to at the present time he shows by the budget for the year 1919-20, when of the expenditures of the Government running over $5,686,000,000 only $57,000,000, or 1.01 percent was devoted to "research, educational and developmental" purposes, while the recent and previous wars represent a total budget of more than $5,200,000,000.

The subject of the "Economic Importance of the Scientific Work of the Government" was presented by Dr. Rosa in a recent address before the Washington Academy of Science.

"The war was conducted on such a gigantic scale," says Dr. Rosa, "that the world's supply of raw and manufactured materials was largely exhausted. The increased demand thus caused for labor and commodities, together with the inflation of currency and credit, and in many cases the reduced efficiency of labor, have raised prices beyond all precedent. Hardship and suffering have come to hundreds of millions of people throughout the world, and political and economic confusion generally have resulted.

"The cost of living during the war increased considerably, but wages were so high that many classes of workers were more prosperous than ever. The Government directed the channels of trade and controlled the supplies of materials with much success, and prices in most cases were kept within bounds. With the end of the war came an end of governmental control, and also with many an end of economy and thrift, and for these and other reasons prices have been mounting steadily ever since. Increased costs led to industrial unrest, strikes, high wages and further rise in prices. Profiteering has been denounced in the press and sought out by the Government, but the average of prices continues to rise.

"It is generally agreed that in order to bring down prices it will be necessary: (1) to contract currency and credit, (2) to economise in the use of necessities and luxuries, and (3) to utilise raw materials and labor more effectively and expand the production of commodities. The first remedy must be worked out by financiers and economists. The second might be accomplished by a nation-wide campaign for thrift and economy; and the third would be greatly aided by co-operative study and scientific and technical research on a comprehensive scale.

"There is a shortage of labor in the country, and a tendency to shorten rather than to lengthen the hours of labor. If, therefore, production is to be increased without increased labor, it is necessary to increase the productivity of labor, that is, to increase the efficiency of men, of machines and of manufacturing methods. To economise in the use of staple commodities and luxuries, to reduce the waste of raw materials, to make use of cheaper materials, to increase the efficiency of men, of machines and processes on a nation-wide scale and at an early date will call for intelligent and energetic effort, comparable in difficulty and importance with the task before the country in 1917 when we entered the World War.

"It is not merely in order to reduce the cost of living to those millions whose incomes have not increased in proportion to the rise in prices, and who in many cases are suffering hardship and distress; but it is to allay industrial discontent and forestall economic and political disturbance or even disaster. The confusion and inequity that have resulted from the rise of prices threaten the stability of society. The Governments of the world are considering what can be done to improve conditions and allay discontent. To hold that Governments cannot or should not deal constructively with the most serious problems of society, but that such matters should be left to chance, without organised effort or leadership, is not a satisfactory position to take after the successful experience with Government leadership in the war."

The Future Of India

(Hongkong Telegraph)

Indications of a transformation in India that will usher in an industrial and scientific age and even tend to root up the caste system to India are seen by Sir Alfred Bourne, K.C.I., C.I.E., F.R.S., Director of the Indian Institute of Science.

The turning of the educated Brahmins to technical study, has been revealed in the first 10 years of the institution's work and Sir Alfred sees the dawning of a day when the old hard and fast lines of society in India will disappear. The Institute which at its inception, could find no Brahmin students now has a majority of Brahmins in its technical classes, and these have begun entering activities of trade which have formerly been barred to them by the lines of caste. In one case educated Brahmins have entered upon the manufacture of glue, which has always been at the bottom of the list for high caste employment.

"I believe that the Brahmins especially, and other castes of India also, are coming to understand that something is needed in India to furnish employment for the brains of the country," he told a representative of the Times of Ceylon. India needs to produce something beyond the raw material for commerce, and the people of India are entitled to some field for their mental development, in addition to the law and politics. There are many branches of science that are useful industry, especially chemistry, and these are the branches that are being emphasised.

Sir Alfred says that, even though the Indians should enter export trade eventually it could not be regarded as competition for British workmen. In view of the set back to production which Great Britain has received following the war, the raw materials of India are not so urgently needed in England as they were before the war. To develop these in India, for Indian consumption, at least, is working no hardship and serving great needs of the Empire by furnishing Indians with legitimate activities for brain and energy.

Sir Alfred, in addition to his connection with the Bangalore Institution, has held posts as Professor of Biology, the Presidency College, Madras. He has had published many text books on scientific and biological subjects.

TILDEN AGAIN VICTORIOUS IN TENNIS MATCH

(Reuter's Service)

Wimbledon, June 27.—In the fourth round of the Men's Singles in the Lawn Tennis Championship today, Mr. W. T. Tilden (America) beat Colonel A. R. F. Kingscote (England) 6-3 5-7 6-4 5-7 6-3. The game was one of the most sensational singles ever seen on the Center Court owing to the sustained very hard hitting by both players.

Mr. Tilden's hurricane services were returned in the most gallant fashion at a tremendous pace. The result was in doubt until the last stroke had been made. Mr. G. J. Ritchie and other well-known players declare that such tennis is a class ahead of the Doherty era.

Mr. Shimidzu has reached the semi-final in the lawn tennis singles championship of the world. The event is noteworthy as the first occasion upon which a Japanese has got that far in the championship.

Mr. Shimidzu today beat Will Ford (England) 6-0, 6-1, 6-3.

FRANCE BUSY AT RECONSTRUCTION

Herbert S. Houston Believes Her Efforts Will Have Hearty American Backing

PREDICTS LIBERAL CREDITS

American Officials Have Made French Think Private Investors Indifferent

Paris, May 24.—Herbert S. Houston, of Doubleday, Page and Co., who has been in France as a member of the Organisation Committee of the International Chamber of Commerce, is a firm believer in the recovery of France.

"It is marvelous," he said to the correspondent of The New York Times today, "to see what France is doing. I have just traveled through 300 miles of devastation, but they were 300 miles of activity. By the side of scores of ruined sugar factories, en route through La Fere to St. Quentin and back through Laon and Rheims, the land is sown with wheat, rye and oats. All the crops are in fine condition. Every one was at work. And that has been true of every part of France from the border of Spain that I have traveled over.

"To say that France is not at work is to speak either foolishly or falsely. Her growing commerce and growing crops give the lie to the statement. Of course the million and more of her sons killed in war and buried in her soil cannot till it, nor can it be tilled by many of the three million more who were wounded. But living men, women and children are at work, giving the world an example of cheerful courage in peace, just as they gave it in war.

"In this work France needs credit for material, of course, and I believe America will help her get it. There has been much misunderstanding in France in regard to America's attitude, and that has been due to failure to keep a clear distinction between the American Government as an investor and the American people as private investors. But the French are not to blame for this, because some of our officials, in loose and ill-considered remarks, are chiefly responsible for it.

BUSINESS SYMPATHY

"The impression has been widely spread here that as far as we were concerned France had been cut adrift and could make port or go down, as fate might decree. Nothing could be further from the truth. Past President Fahey of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, stated that fact last week when he told the Paris Chamber of Commerce that business America, as organised in thousands of Chambers of Commerce, was solidly behind France prepared to help her with financing and in every other way in her great task of reconstruction. But this help will be private and not governmental.

"America has learned much of foreign finance and exchange in recent months. The trade balance of last year of $4,000,000,000 in our favor is not an unmixed blessing. It throws the whole economic world out of balance. It is being driven at last into our consciousness that we are part of the economic world. That knowledge is the beginning of at least this much wisdom: financing Europe's needs is financing our own foreign trade. We are getting a grip on that basic fact. The result is already apparent. Manufacturers are giving longer credits than ever to their foreign customers. Now they are asking bankers how collective credits can be established that can adequately meet the situation.

"The American Bankers' Association has a strong committee under the chairmanship of John McHugh of New York, working on the problem. Just before sailing Mr. Hugh told me that effective progress was being made toward a solution. That is likely to take the form of what is called in Europe an investment trust, with bankers all over the United States as stockholders and as distributers of the foreign securities the trust will buy. It may either resell these securities to private investors or issue its own debentures against them and sell those. And today there are 14,000,000 private investors in America, while we had but 400,000 when we entered the war.

"Some one asked me if these investors would be likely to buy such an international bond for the repayment of the indemnity to France, as was discussed at and since the conference, and I replied at once that in my judgment they would, especially if European investors showed their own faith in these securities by buying a fair amount of them.

"America wants France to be repaid for her property losses. These are not matters of punitive indemnity—that is not discussed—nor her costs of war—that is no longer considered. They are matters simply of manifest justice. But they should be paid quickly. The population is returning to the devastated regions. Already it is two-thirds of the pre-war population. It is showing its faith by its works. Let any one go and see. But it must have money immediately, so that it can 'carry on.' If I know my country, she will not fail to do her full part.

SAYS GERMANY MUST DISARM

"But, as France says with practical iteration, 'it must never happen again.' Twenty Frenchmen have asked me why Germany should not provide without further delay the great guarantee against its repetition—disarmament. And the only answer that any one who believes that right triumphed in the war can give to that question is that Germany should provide that fundamental guarantee at once. That guarantee is the only condition on which the Allies can permit the restoration of Germany's economic power, however many Keynes may try to prove the contrary. France knows this in her heart, and if England and America do not know it in the same way they must turn their head squarely on this basic question of a peace settlement without an hour's delay."

rrangements with coast wise teamship companies to convey ice from Hongkong to Shanghai. t will be remembered during the lood in Canton last year, that he tobacco company shipped a reat deal of the cereal from Kiangsi, Wusih and Hunan to he South. The experiment oved to be successful and it will now be repeated. The cost the shipments will be adanced by the company.

The Boatmen's Guild at a eeting of the directors yesterday, decided to refuse to ship any ice intended for export.

The following is the proclamation issued by the Municipal Council.

MUNICIPAL NOTIFICATION

From investigations made by the Council into the causes contributing to the present abnormally high price of rice, it appears that, in their greed for personal gain and unmindful of the hardships and suffering caused to poor people, certain persons have accumulated stocks of rice, which they are withholding from the market, creating a temporary shortage of supplies, and forcing up the price to an unwarranted figure.

Rice is the staple food of the Chinese people, and profiteering or speculating in the food of the people is an offense against the law, and severely punishable.

Notice is accordingly given that any persons profiteering in rice, whether by the withholding of stocks or by any other means are liable to prosecution with severe penalties on conviction, and with confiscation of their stocks.

The public is earnestly requested to report any cases of rice profiteering that may come to its knowledge. Such reports should be in writing, addressed to the Commissioner of Police, Central Police Station, Foochow Road, and should give as full particulars as possible, so as to facilitate prosecution against the concerned.

By order,
N. O. LIDDELL,
Secretary.
Council Room,
Shanghai, June 30, 1920

BOLSHEVIK KEEN FOR TRIAL TODAY

Something Approximating Real Baseball Is Promised This Afternoon

The big attraction at the Ball Park this afternoon will be the argument between the Shanghai Regulars and the Bolsheviki team organised by Tinkham to rescue baseball in Shanghai out of the slump it has fallen into, by reason of the very little opposition offered the fast aggregation now representing Shanghai.

The Bolsheviki will be on hand in full force and from the arguments that have been overheard pro and con, it look as if some hot stuff will be handed out for the delectation of the local fans.

While it is generally accepted that the Regulars have the better individual players, the Bolsheviki claim their inside work is on a par with that of their rivals. They claim pep and fight will make up for individual superiority that they lack.

Manager Tinkham has a good selection of pitchers to choose from and while they have not appeared on the local diamond, they all have reputations behind them, acquired at home. The game will start at five o'clock and any failing to be present will in as a treat.

The following is the list of players who make up the Bolshevik line up. The nine who will carry the fight to the Shanghai outfit will be selected from this list. Manager Tinkham urges all those named below to be on hand this afternoon.

Bolshevik line up:
Held, Catcher
Hoffman Catcher or ss
Hopkins 1st

LEVINSKY A WINNER

(Reuter's Service)

Cleveland, Ohio, June 26.—Battling Levinsky beat Sergeant Smith in a ten round boxing contest here today.

FIRST SWIMMING MEETING IS HELD

Preliminary Contests Last Night Witnessed By Fair Sized Crowd

The initial meeting of the Rowing Club's swimmers took place last evening. There was quite a fair attendance, though no one member of the Bath Committee was present.

Those who did turn up, however, got together heats for the one-length (any stroke) handicap and for the one-length breast stroke handicap. Wallem won his heat in the any-stroke, A. E. Donald doing likewise in his heat. The final was left over for next week.

In the breast stroke race Wallem was again victorious in his heat, while Lawrie Smith annexed the other preliminary heat, the final again being reserved for another evening. The swimming of Wallem was much admired and he seems likely to be quite an acquisition for the Rowing Club. He is also a capable exponent of water polo.

The water polo match was between two pick-up teams, yclept Whites and Blues. Quite an interesting and fast game (somewhat better than is usually seen at the very beginning of the season) was witnessed. It resulted in a draw of five goals each side. Mr. T. D. Macdonald kindly manipulated the whistle, his rulings being invariably acceptable to both sides.

Country Cricket

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 28.—Surrey beat Essex by 8 wickets.

EPIDEMIC IN SALVADOR

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, June 26.—It is learned here that an epidemic of yellow fever is raging in Salvador.

FILM LASSITUDE

Do Cinemas Induce Languor?

Do constant visits to cinemas induce lassitude? This question is provoked by the fact that some people complain that after a visit to "the pictures" a weary languid feeling takes possession of them, with a severe headache. The probable explanation is that the cinema is really a test of one's health. When a person is run-down or anæmic, a visit to "the pictures" produces the symptoms mentioned. In such cases the hint should be taken promptly, and measures adopted for building up the health to normal.

Some interesting facts have been related concerning a young woman engaged in the film industry as "examiner," an exacting duty in the manufacture of films. To undertake this work necessitates an individual being in the best of health.

This is the view of Miss E. Lenton, of 58, Albany Street, Regent's Park, London, who is employed as a film examiner by a London company. Through suffering severely from lassitude and general debility she found her work difficult to carry on, and has been compelled at different periods to stay away from business. Now she has completely recovered, thanks to the curative powers of Dr. Williams' pink pills.

"I never was strong as a child," she said in an interview. "When about 15 years of age I became very anæmic. I was pale-faced and miserable; I took many different kinds of medicines but no good resulted.

"This went on for a long time, and I found it almost impossible to carry on with my work as a film examiner. I felt unhappy, helpless and irritable, work was a trouble and I had to stay at home sick many times.

"I never wanted to sleep, or indeed to get up in the morning. Through the day I was always tired, and my limbs ached all day long. Time after time I was under the care of doctors, but they seemed unable to make me well.

"One day I met a friend, who has suffered as I was then suffering, and she told me of the wonderful benefit she had derived from Dr. Williams' pink pills. She advised me to try them at once. I purchased a supply and at the end of the first week I found myself improving in health. As I persevered with the pills my tiredness disappeared, my appetite became better, and in the mornings I got out of bed feeling quite fresh. I found my work less arduous during the day, and at night I was able to sleep well.

"Now I feel ten times better than I did a little while ago. I feel quite a different woman altogether.

"I heartily recommend anyone suffering from general debility, anæmia, and similar ailments to try Dr. Williams' pink pills; they are really wonderful."

If you are suffering from impoverished blood you cannot afford to wait another day before giving Dr. Williams' pink pills a thorough trial. Go to any dealer and obtain a supply, or send $1.50 for a bottle, $8 for 6, to Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai. The price includes postage.

West Of Ireland In Vision And Belief

BY BENJAMIN DE CASSERES

Visions And Beliefs In The West Of Ireland. Collected and arranged by Lady Gregory, with two essays and notes by W. B. Yeats. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

(New York Times)

The Celt is the original ghost-fancier. Ireland is the "magic land forlorn" of Keats's poem. And it is her magic that is forever making us forget her forlornness. De Valera may come and De Valeras may go (more speed to them!); but the wild demoniac gleam in the eyes of the Shan Van Vocht will go on forever—that is, if Lady Gregory and W. B. Yeats and their inheritors will go on collecting the folk-lore and the myths of Ireland until the martian invasion from over the etheric Rhine.

In a world lying prone on its rotting mattress of "facts" Ireland is the one country today that keeps aflame the fires of fantasy and the moods of imaginative perversity. She still holds secret council with elves and fays, demons and Dooms, leprecawns and banshees. The solemn Sanhedrins of Science—fudge! Atoms are gnomeholes, the air is a magician's pocket, the sea is the sob of the lost, the moors beat with the feet of wraiths—and the Parliament of All-Ireland is a gorgeous castle in the air.

The Irishman's skull is the realm of the Sidhe. It is the Country of the Young, as Lady Gregory calls it. "Fighting is heard among them, and music that is more beautiful than any of this world; they are seen dancing on the rocks . . . the greatest power belongs to their fool, the Fool of the Forth, Amadanna-Breena. He is their strongest, the most wicked, the most deadly: there is no cure for any one he has struck."

That divine Fool, Amadan-na-Breena, lives in the heart of every Celt and in his head, too. He is the light of his dream and the logic of his reason. He sends him on his political goose-chase and his tragic expeditions into Prester John Land and Domdaniel. It is a wise Fool, this Amadan-na-Breena, and not of this world. He is the Playboy, Don Quixote and Till Eulenspiegel, and the Sinbad of the Northern Seas carries him on his back to the ends of his history. He is his pixies and his Satan. When he leaves him Ireland will lose her dreams, her Daemon, and become calculating, material, logical, stupid—even as you and I.

The folk-lore, the myths and the legends of other peoples seem not wholly a part of those peoples. They are stories of Lost Eldens or Kingdoms Come. Not so Ireland. She is literally her myths and her past—like that other world-exotic people, the Jews.

The Englishman can never hope to subdue the Irishman, because England battles against a myth, an immaterial and nerve-socketed dream, an unsubstantial army of phantom Celts that no constabulary or acts of Parliament can ultimately touch. This is not a political but a psychological fact. Napoleon said no cannon could ever be invented that could blow away an idea; and no act of Parliament or Tommy's uniform can do the Wist! Begone! business to vital, uncon querable myth.

The greatness of Ireland lies in her tremendous imagination. In the Parade of Progress she plays the fool in motley. Bravo, Ireland! Your crown of thorns is jeweled with the eyes of the Sidhe, and you. Via Dolorosa was asphalted by the banshees and Queen Mab.

Lady Gregory's book is in two volumes. They are made up of hundreds of "psychic experiences" taken from the mouths of the people of the west of Ireland. These are not the testimonials of ouija boards, "mediums" and other strawberry festival stupidities; but the visions and gleams and thousand year deep phantasms of the commonplace. No attempt is made by either Lady Gregory or William Butler Yeats, who has written an essay in each volume to explain scientifically or religiously these superstitions (?) beliefs and experiences. No Glad Tidings are pumped at us at the end of chapters. In fact, many and indeed most, of these tidings are exceeding mournful.

Theosophy and Irish mysticism dovetail in together almost perfectly. The theosophic theory of habit-shells and elementals as a part of the concrete makeup of Irish legend and myth and superstition (?). This is not a book of Maeterlinckian music or Logical ludicrousness; but is poetry, history, fact—yes, fact, for the facts of the imagination and belief are as profoundly real as the illusions of the senses which we call facts. Whatever is, is a fact. An absurdity is merely a fact not yet rationalised.

Mr. Yeats, some time agone the greatest poet writing in English since the passing of Swinburne accompanied Lady Gregory on many of her trips through the west of Ireland and heard the telling of many of these strange things instinct with the soil. His essay in the second volume titled "Swedenborg, Mediums and the Desolate Places" is far the better of the two essays in the book. One would know that Mr. Yeats was a great poet by reading his prose, with its remote notes of a beautiful sadness and its mystical apprehension and visualisation of that which is far and near simultaneously.

It is a short review of the belief in apparitions, with observations on Paracelsus, Sir Thomas Browne (whose style is of the whimsy of miracle), Jacob Boehme and Swedenborg. In "The Spiritual Diary" of the latter Mr. Yeats went forth to a great fantastic adventure, wherein he rediscovered the soul of Ireland. "He," says Mr. Yeats, "considered heaven and hell and God, the angels, the whole destiny of man as if he were sitting before a large table in a Government office putting little pieces of mineral ore into small square boxes for an assistant to pack away in drawers."

He blueprinted the Great Mirage, whereas the Celt has made a mirage out of all of Nature's blueprints. Difference in method, not in objective. That Swedenborg is so matter-of-fact in his descriptions of the "invisibles" is more astonishing than if he had written in dithyrambs. "The good are amid smooth grass and garden walks and the clear sunlight of Claude Lorraine." The words are Mr. Yeats's.

Still, for all this prosiness of Swedenborg, it fell upon a time when he was to write that marvelously beautiful paradox, "The angels of heaven who move eternally toward the springtime of their youth," which the Irish poet quotes, as every lover of mystical poetry has quoted—or will.

All those who pursue the great Celtic Legend and all those who are interested in the curious imaginative adventures of the human race must have this book.

INVINCIBLE MINNIE

Invincible Minnie. By Elisabeth Sanxay Holding. New York: George H. Doran Company.

Invincible Minnie, quintessence of womanliness, whose mission in life is simply to exist and whose sole aim is to have her own way, is a penetrating portrait, courageously painted with a rare absence of sentimentality, of that purposelessly destructive force in life so inadequately described as the "womanly woman."

We can recall no piece of fiction, with the exception of Sudermann's masterful short story, "The Purpose," which portrays the unmoral woman more unflinchingly than Elisabeth Sanxay Holding has done in her vivid novel.

Ruthlessly honest as this thoroughly modern book is, the harsh tones of the picture it presents of an unlovely type are softened with humor and charity. The author never sits in judgment upon the Minnies of the world. She does not even say that all women are Minnies; the unselfish character of Minnie's sister is evidence to the contrary.

It is in the selection and restrained presentation of actions illustrative of Minnie's bottomless unmorality that the author's artistic delicacy triumphs. There is not a sentence in arraignment of Minnie, yet when we set the book down and sum up her character all the adjectives and phrases associated with moral color-blindness rush naturally to mind—unscrupulous, hypocritical, dissembling, without sympathy or sensitiveness. As the author herself tells us in the foreword of her book, we feel that Minnie, the mental and moral slattern whose only ideal is expediency, is "capable of everything."

The author's style shows traces of much reading of the better English novelists, but is refreshingly individual and unaffected. That sense of indefiniteness as to the story's goal which so often haunts the reader in a novel of character is occasionally heightened by the author's unintentional arousing of curiosities which she does not fully satisfy. We are told early in the book, for example, that Minnie's grief over her father's death was her last wholly genuine and disinterested emotion. "Here," we say, "is a key to the girl's spiritual development," but the effect of her bereavement is never again mentioned and might have been omitted entirely for any bearing it has upon Minnie's character. Slight faults like this stand out more sharply than they would in a book of lesser merit.

The minor characters in the book are drawn with much skill. We have all known the original of Minnie's aunt, a queenly, annoyingly insolvent old lady to whom the fact of her being a Defoe is of immense significance and the well-spring of her conviction of her own superiority to every one else. Successful Horace Naylor, with his pathetic regard for Lionel, his futile, lovable wastrel brother, is delightfully drawn in a few strokes:

> Horace was not the classic business man of stage and story, who despises and berates the idler; he was something much newer, the money maker who is apologetic and secretly bewildered, who feels called upon to justify his activity. . . . A heavy, bull-necked, red-faced man with a black mustache and melancholy, billious eyes, who smoked a big cigar and stared nowhere. This was Horace.

Elisabeth Sanxay Holding is an American woman who has lived most of her life near New York City. She is married and has children. It is a convention of book reviewing to call attention to the fact that a novel is its author's first. As mention of this always has an apologetic air, the present reviewer has left it to the last sentence about a book so indubitably a work of artistic power that anything savoring of apology for it would be an ignorant affront.

THE PASSION FOR LIFE

The Passion For Life. By Joseph Hocking. With frontispiece. Fleming H. Revell Company.

When Francis Erskine went down to the little seaside village of St. Issey in Cornwall he went there to die. Barely 30 years old, and at the very opening of what promised to be a highly successful career at the bar, he had developed what the great physician, Dr. Rhomboid, diagnosed as a fatal disease. He might live only a month or so, the doctor told him; the utmost he could hope for was a year, with recurrent and increasingly violent attacks of pain. He had only a small amount of money, enough to last him, with economy, for the year. So his devoted servant Simpson, who had been with his father before him, found the queer little wooden house near the abandoned tin mine on the Cornish coast, which was to rent cheap because the old man who built it and who had lived a hermit existence was believed to have been murdered there some six months before, and his ghost was said to haunt the spot.

The threat of fast-approaching death aroused a new interest in Erskine—an interest in religion and in what religion might have to tell him of the chances of a life beyond the grave. There was a Methodist chapel at St. Issey, as well as a fine old church; he attended both, without deriving a grain of help or information from either. Apathy, indifference, marked the slender congregations, both in church and chapel. Some of the old people with whom Erskine presently became acquainted told him it used not to be so, that in their youth Methodism had been a powerful and a living force in Cornwall, though now it had lapsed into a mere perfunctory, habitual acquiescence. Nor was this, for him, new curiosity about religion the only interest which developed for Erskine during his stay in St. Issey. After a little while peculiar things began to happen near the small house, and by and by he received a strange warning, which did not disturb him in the least.

It was in the Spring that Francis Erskine came to St. Issey, the Spring of 1914, and the regeneration of religion through the influence of the World War is the real theme of the book, though a love story and a mystery having to do with some German spies are interwoven with it. There is material for a really worth-while book in this novel, and the tale begins well. If the author had only been able to restrain his fondness for sugar and sentimentality he might have been able to maintain the whole at the level of the beginning. As it is, the story retains the reader's attention, and has some interesting suggestions.

THE CATHOLIC DIRECTORY

It Presents Interesting Figures Of Church Growth For 1919

The Official Catholic Directory for 1920 (copyrighted by P. J. Kenedy and Sons, New York) shows much data which is interesting in these days, when the growth of religion is questioned.

The United States with its possessions contains 27,650,204 members of the Catholic faith, 17,735,553 of whom are in the United States proper. The total represents an increase of 186,220. The list of secular clergy shows 15,389, an increase of 337, while priests of religious orders have been increased by 94 new members, making a grand total of 21,019.

During the past year 148 new parishes have been established, making the number 10,608. In addition to 5,573 missions regularly attended. Free parochial schools now number 5,852 in the United States, with a daily attendance of 1,701,213.

PROFITEERS DO WELL IN GERMANY

Prices Continue To Soar Despite Berlin's Efforts And Rise In Marks

UP 650 PCT. SINCE 1914

Increase In Necessities About 17 Percent In First Two Months Of 1920

New York, May 24.—Efforts by the German Government to call a halt upon the steady increase in the cost of living during the last few months have had little success, according to reports found in recent issues of German newspapers telling of the continued rise in prices, despite the occasional jailing of a profiteer and the improvement in the exchange value of the mark.

In a table compiled by Dr. Moritz Elsas of Frankfort showing to cost of maintaining a family of four, by index figures for various German cities, the advance during the first two months of 1920 was put at about 17 percent in Frankfort and considerably more in some of the other large cities. The rise since April 1, 1919, was 98 percent. The index figure for the first week of March was 198, compared with 170 for the same week in January, and 26½ for the first week of 1914, the cost since the last-named date having increased about seven and one-half times. The figures for foodstuffs rose from Jan. 1, 1920, to March 1 by 11 percent. for clothing 37 percent, for rent 5, for light and heating 24 and for incidentals 25 percent.

In Berlin the index figure rose to 220 on March 1 from 174 on Jan. 1, 1920; in Solingen it rose to 217 from 181; in Cologne to 214 from 176; in Mainz to 208 from 188; in Erfurt to 208 from 160; in Essen to 206 from 174; in Frankfort-on-the-Oder to 205 from 168; in Muhlhausen in Thuringia to 202 from 168; in Leipzig to 200 from 181. In printing these figures the Leipziger Volkszeitung of April 16 remarked that misery and general need was sure to become intensified as the result of this rise in the cost of living, as the recent advances in wages and salaries had by no means kept pace with the cost of necessities.

The Berlin City Council has been compelled to increase the charges for maintenance and treatment in the municipal to 12 marks a day for adult Berliners and 6 marks for children, and to 24 marks a day for non-Berliners, both adult and children. In explanation of this action it is pointed out that, in addition to the increase in the cost of food, the prices of many medicines had risen from 100 to 2,000 percent, and that even under the new rates the city had to contribute half the cost of caring for the Berlin patients.

In Leipzig the tailors have established a new scale of prices for making up material for suits which ranges from 800 to 1,250 marks for men and from 120 to 500 for women, the first figure being for making a plain house dress. To get an overcoat made costs from 750 to 1,050 marks and from 520 to 740 is charged for turning and altering a suit. Pressing runs from 20 to 25 marks.

The latest boost in the cost of coal at the mines of 20 marks per ton has, with the incidental additions allowed, brought the price of anthracite nut up to 257 marks a ton, compared with a pre-war rate of 22 marks, while coaking coal brings 280 and 385, against 35 and 39 in 1914. On May 12 a Berlin cable despatch reported the organisation of a State Coal Council to control production and fix prices.

When the representatives of the Foreign Commerce Corporation of America were in the capital of Czecho-Slovakia last month looking over the field for possible business, they devoted considerable time to investigating the beet-sugar industry of Bohemia, possibly with a view to promoting sugar exports to the United States, says a Prague despatch of April 17 printed in the Vienna Neue Freie Presse. Grayson M. P. Murphy received the representatives of the beet-sugar industry and discussed the possibility of exchanging Bohemian sugar for American raw materials. Before the World War the territory now embraced in Czecho-Slovakia produced some 1,100,000 metric tons of sugar annually, of which about 800,000 tons were exported, according to E. F. Prantner, American representative of the Czecho-Slovakia Manufacturers' Association. Last year's production amounted to between 650,000 and 700,000 tons, of which 350,000 tons were sold to other European countries.

The Berliner Tageblatt of April 20 reports the formation in Christiania of a committee headed by a Mrs. Johannesen for the purpose of finding places among the Norwegians where several thousand undernourished German children may spend a Summer vacation. Norway has been taking care of some 3,000 children from Vienna for some time, and has also sent food to the value of 3,000,000 Norweigan crowns to Austria. Furthermore, the Norwegian Embassy in Berlin has distributed foodstuffs to many hundreds of poor families. In Denmark thousands of German little ones have found welcome havens during the last Winter, and the work, which is under the direction of J. P. Nielsen, a prominent labor union official now known as "the father of the German Vacation Children," will be continued during the Summer. The Danish unions have spent some 1,500,000 marks in transporting the German children to their temporary homes.

Agrarians and Socialists will control the Lettish Constituent Assembly, according to reports of the election results found in Danish newspapers of April 26. Of the 150 members of the constituent the Agrarians, in combination with smaller groups of the same tendency, elected 55; the Social Democrats, 52; the Democrats, 5; the Radical Democrats, 6, and the parties representing the national minorities, 19. The remaining members are divided among small Lettish groups. All Lettish men and women 21 years of age were entitled to vote according to a law providing for secret and universal suffrage and proportional representation. Soldiers 18 years of age or over were entitled to vote.

Results of the April elections for the Constituent Assembly of Lithuania reported in Swedish papers indicate that the Clerical Party will form the strongest faction, with the Social Democrats second and the Popular Socialists third. There will be four or five delegates representing the Poles and Jews. Elections for the Constituent will not be held in the Lithuanian territory occupied by the Poles until such territory is evacuated.

Berlin papers of April 20 report the arrival in the German capital of Signor de Martino to take up his duties as Charge d'Affaires of Italy. He is to be named Italian Ambassador to Germany as soon as the Entente Powers agree upon the date of Germany's re-entrance into full diplomatic relations with them. The German Government furnished Signor de Martino with a special train from Munich.

Berlin newspapers announce the founding in the German capital of a "Czecho-Slovak Banking Institution for Foreign Trade," with a capital of 25,000,000 crowns. The new institution was launched by the Bohemian Union Bank, the Prague Credit Bank and the Agrarian Bank.

Negotiations for the purchase by a Japanese company of the holdings of the German South Seas Phosphate Company of Bremen are reported in the German press. The Frankfurther Zeitung says the purchase price is to be paid in yen.

Indian Officials To Give Up Titles

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 28.—The Bombay correspondent of the Times, emphasising the meaning of the Khaliphate committee's resolution of non-cooperation with the Indian Government, as a protest against the Turkish Treaty, says that Mr. Gandhi, the Indian Nationalist leader, explained that the first stage is the surrender of titles and resignation of honorary posts. If this is not effective, the second stage will be the resignation of Government servants.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have paregoric or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a few drops too many will produce the sleep from which there is no waking. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labeling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given your physician know of what to your children unless you or it is composed. Castoria does not contain narcotics.

Secrets of Beauty

WILL you kindly inform me how to redden lips that are always pale?—MRS. J. T. D.

Even pale lips that have not been denuded of their natural freshness are far more attractive than the artificial brilliancy imparted to them by the customary paints and lotions for this purpose. Bathing the lips with an equal mixture of glycerine and rosewater will help to keep them in good condition.

WHAT will take the lice and nits out of my hair? I have tried so many things. I use the fine comb every day and still I cannot keep it clean. I am sure people can see them. I am healthy, but my hair is turning gray. Can this be a cause of my trouble?—MRS. M. S.

Wet your hair thoroughly with the following solution:

Dilute acetic acid	8 ounces
Water	8 ounces

The above mixture dissolves the glutinous material fixing the nits to the hair, after which the nits may be carefully combed out. Repeat the process as often as necessary. Keep the hair thoroughly clean by frequent shampoos. The gray hair is caused by lack of sufficient oil in the sebaceous glands. Daily massage and the application of stimulating tonics will overcome this trouble.

CAN you tell me where I can procure a nose clip? My little girl used to have a well-shaped nose, but lately it has been getting too broad.—M. E.

Names and addresses cannot be given in these columns, but if you will inquire at any up-to-date drug store, or even in one of the big departments stores I am sure you will be able to find what you want. Home devices, such as a clothespin with a spring in it, or even a stiff watch spring holding pads on each side of the nose can be utilized to advantage.

I AM rather well proportioned except for the fact that my face, neck, arms and hands are too fat. How can I reduce these parts of my body quickly?—AVONTE M.

Heavy massage of the fleshy portions of your body will help reduce them. Use both hands and pinch the flesh vigorously except on the face, which must be more gently handled. If you use the absorbent lotion given below you may expect some slight improvement after a six weeks' trial, but even better results will be secured after a six months' period:

Tincture of iodine	30 minims
Iodide of potassium	60 grains
Hyposulphite of soda	20 grains
Distilled water	7 ounces
Aniseed water	170 minims

Household Helps

Salt in Starch.

A LITTLE fine salt added to starch greatly improves its quality.

Removing Iron Rust.

SOAK the spots in fresh lemon juice and hold immediately over the steam from a teakettle until they disappear.

Blowing Bubbles.

THE children's bubble blowing sport can be greatly improved by adding half a teaspoonful of glycerine to each quart of water. This gives tenacity to the bubbles.

For Scorched Spots.

BY holding under running cold water for a few moments the stain left by a too hot iron will quickly disappear.

To Brighten Rugs.

ADD a teaspoonful of turpentine to half a pail of warm water. Dip a cloth in this, squeeze dry and rub the rug vigorously. This treatment will make the rug look like new.

Cleaning Jewelry.

ONE teaspoonful of ammonia in a teacupful of water makes a good cleaning fluid for gold or silver jewelry. Apply with a soft cloth and wipe thoroughly dry.

Cakes with No Shortening

Delicious Mocha Cake.

ADD ½ cup chopped English walnut meats to the sunshine cake mixture. Bake in angel cake pan, cool, split and fill with sweetened whipped cream flavored with strong coffee.

Sunshine Cake.

BEAT 5 egg yolks until light and creamy. Beat 7 egg whites until foamy. Add 1-3 teaspoon cream of tartar and continue beating until dry. Gradually beat 1 cup of sugar into the whites, add the well-beaten yolks and mix well. Fold in 2-3 cup sifted flour and add 1 teaspoon orange extract. Bake in a tube cake pan about 45 minutes.

Economical Sponge Cake.

BEAT 3 eggs until very light, add 1 cup sugar and ½ teaspoon salt and beat until creamy. Add juice and grated rind of ½ lemon and 4 tablespoons cold water and stir gently. Then fold in 1 cup flour sifted with 1½ teaspoons baking powder. Turn into an average sized loaf cake pan and bake slowly nearly an hour. Sponge cakes are baked in ungreased pans if the pans are kept exclusively for sponge cake. If this is not possible slightly oil or grease the pans and dredge with flour. Turn cake upside down in cake cooler as soon as it comes from the oven and it will usually come out very easily.

Hot Water Sponge Cake.

BEAT 2 egg yolks until light and lemon colored. Add ½ cup sugar gradually and continue beating. Add ⅓ cup hot water, ½ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon lemon extract, 2 well-beaten egg yolks and 1 cup flour sifted with 1½ teaspoons baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt. Bake in a shallow pan about ½ hour.

Angel Cake.

BEAT 8 egg whites until foamy. Add 1 teaspoon cream of tartar and continue beating until stiff. Add 1 cup sugar gradually. Fold in ¾ cup flour which has been sifted 3 or 4 times with ¼ teaspoon salt. Add ¾ teaspoon vanilla. Bake nearly an hour in an ungreased angel cake pan. When cake begins to brown place a piece of buttered paper over it.

Plain Sponge Cake.

BEAT 4 egg whites with ¼ teaspoon salt until light and dry. Beat in gradually ½ cup sugar. Beat the yolks of 4 eggs exactly as long as the whites are beaten and gradually beat in ½ cup sugar. Add 1 tablespoon orange or lemon juice and grated rind of ½ lemon or orange. Beat yolks into whites and fold in ¾ cup sifted flour. Be careful not to beat mixture after flour is added. Bake in a shallow cake pan about ½ hour.

Standard Sponge Cake.

BEAT 6 egg yolks until light and lemon colored. Add 1 cup sugar gradually, beating constantly. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice, grated rind of ½ lemon and 6 stiffly beaten egg whites. When yolks and whites are partially combined fold in 1 cup flour sifted with ¼ teaspoon salt. Bake about 1 hour in a slow oven.

Orange Sponge Cake.

BEAT 3 egg yolks until light. Add 1 cup sugar gradually. Fold in 1 cup flour sifted with 2 teaspoons baking powder. Then gently add 3 stiffly-beaten egg whites. Pour juice of 1 orange into a glass cup and add enough hot water to make ½ cup. Add grated rind of ½ orange and stir quickly into cake mixture. Bake in a shallow buttered pan.

Ladyfingers.

BEAT 3 egg whites until stiff and dry. Add 1-3 cup sifted powdered sugar gradually and continue beating. Add 3 well-beaten egg yolks and ¼ teaspoon vanilla. Mix and sift 1-3 cup flour and ¼ teaspoon salt. Fold sifted flour into other ingredients. Bake in lady-finger pans or shape as desired on unbuttered paper. Sprinkle with sifted powdered sugar and bake about 8 minutes in a moderate oven.

Advice to Would-Be Brides

NEVER telephone your fiance when angry or slightly vexed. Remember that you cannot see the play of the features and you will say things boldly which could never be said "face to face." In fact, do not form the habit of calling him up either at his office or his own home. Many a man has lost his enthusiasm and passion by having too much attention along this line.

Man does not like to make love in the bold glare of the spotlight. He always prefers the moon, and the girl who lets a man's employers and business partners, to say nothing of his sisters and his cousins and his aunts, into his love affair, soon takes all the romance out of life.

Never write too many letters. As a rule men hate to write letters, and do not want to receive them. Letters are apt to be a mania with women. But any man who has had much experience with women is a little shy of written sentiments.

"Walk to Troy, but never write a letter," was the motto of a very wise man. Many misunderstandings and many a divorce court scandal have been brought to light by this indulgence of the pen.

Never look at yourself when in public. Some girls have the habit of boldly displaying vanity boxes right in the middle of a man's heated conversation. Others cannot pass a mirror without taking a peek. Man is a conceited creature and he wants to have every glance for himself. The clever maiden would rather have a few stray locks and an unpowdered nose than to lose a man's proposal or the best part of his story.

Never be first at a rendezvous, yet avoid keeping a man waiting more than a few minutes. A beautiful actress who made a practise of keeping every man waiting at least half an hour had this simple code: "The worse you treat them the keener they are." Of course, this is not true. But the girl who is too enthusiastic, too ready, is always spurned by men and ridiculed by her own sex.

The wise woman keeps her veil down all the time. She never makes marriage too easy. Men are piqued by something they don't understand, and pique is an invaluable ally, a most potent spur to further interest.

Never forget his personal tastes. The man who hates sweets is greatly relieved when savories are put before him. The girl who, time after time, has to inquire: "How many lumps?" or, worse still, supplies them when a completely unsweetened scheme is desired, is one to whom the proud, sensitive male heart will ever remain cold.

Never speak crossly to your little sisters or brothers or kick the kitten when your betrothed is about. No matter how sweet you are to him afterward, he will begin to think.

Kicking for Youth

ONE of the best methods for developing the muscles of the abdomen is high kicking, says Annette Kellermann in her new book on "Physical Beauty and How to Keep It."

I know that kicking for ladies is considered in bad taste, she goes on to say, but that is because skirts are in bad taste when coupled with any sort of activity of the legs other than stiff-kneed walking. But it is perfectly respectable to kick in your gym suit or in any clothes you like, or in no clothes at all, in the privacy of your own room.

Don't kick in the air, but get something definite to kick at. A piece of stiff pasteboard is good; fasten strings from the four corners and hang it from a hook on the ceiling or the top of a doorway.

Start at an easy height and kick it a resounding whack, first with one foot and then with the other. Now raise it a bit, and keep raising it from day to day. You will be surprised to find how quickly you will be able to kick as high as your head.

Get up a kicking competition with your best chum or your husband, if you are lucky enough to have one who doesn't think that the duties of womanhood are so sacred that he would condemn you to make the bricks of humanity without the straw of health.

But kick, anyway. It is a rare and jolly sport and will keep you youthful of spirit as well as of figure.

NOTICE

Whereas under instructions from the Ministry of Communications at Peking to the effect that the management of the "Hwah" line of steamers, their Marine Insurance and all Expenditure in connection with the said steamers are to be entrusted to the care of the Yu Fong Steamship Co. who shall make advances to meet all expenditure, whereas, after the transfer, this Administration shall still strictly exercise due supervision with a view to prevent unnecessary expenditure, and whereas the Yu Fong S.S. Co. have since fixed the first of July, 1920 as the date to take over the management, I, as Commissioner of this Administration have transferred all documents relating to all steamers and of accounts pending settlement to the Yu Fong S.S. Co.

Commencing from the first of July, 1920, this Administration will cease to receive or pay all steamers' accounts. All moneys due to this administration before the 1st July, 1920, and now outstanding will be received by the Yu Fong S.S. Co., and all moneys due by this Administration will be paid by the Yu Fong S.S. Co.

The above transfer has been reported to the Ministry of Communications by wire in addition to notifying the Yu Fong S.S. Co. to carry out all conditions in conformity with the agreement entered into by the Ministry of Communications with the Yu Fong S.S. Co. Adverting to the notice inserted in the leading papers by the Yu Fong S.S. Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows in their Exchange Circular for week ending June 30:

Exchange:—From quotations given below it will be seen that the London price of silver has ruled unsteady, the last quotation received 52½d. for ready and 51⅝d. forward is about the same as last week's closing price, but on a downward tendency. There is little doubt that the price of Silver has been again influenced by speculative sales by Gold Dealers of T.T. on London in this market at rates high enough to make purchases of silver profitable to the Banks. A relapse in the price of silver has occurred recently on every occasion on which this support has slackened. Reports with regard to Exports are not at present encouraging, in any case it would appear that the usual "seasons" will be delayed. Meanwhile it will be difficult for local speculation to offer much further support to silver.

At the close our exchange market is very quiet with an easy tendency.

Stocks of silver are reported:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 37,000,000 a decline of Tls. 800,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $19,020,000 a decline of $150,000.

Estimated total value in Taels 50,900,000 a decline of Tls. 900,000.

MUNICIPAL NOTIFICATION

No. 2715.

SHANGHAI MUNICIPAL COUNCIL 6 PER CENT. STERLING LOAN, 1920.

Amount £750,000

Price of Issue £100 per cent.

UNDER the authority of Resolution VII passed at the Annual Meeting of Ratepayers on April 7, 1920, the Council hereby invites applications for Bearer Debentures (with coupons attached) in the 6 percent. Sterling Loan of 1920, which is issued on the following terms:—

(1) Debentures to Bearer, with Sterling interest coupons attached, will be issued at £100 percent in denominations of £1,000, £500, £100 and £50.

(2) The Debentures of this issue will bear interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum, payable on June 30 and December 31 in each year by sterling demand draft on London at par, or in silver (local currency) at the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation's Shanghai current demand buying rate on London on date of presentation of the relative coupon. The first payment of interest will be made on December 31, 1920.

(3) Applications, accompanied by payment in full, will be received by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, No. 12 The Bund, on and after May 1, up to and including June 30, 1920, the Council reserving to itself the right of closing the subscription lists on any day previous to June 30, 1920, by Notification in the Municipal Gazette and Public Press of Shanghai.

(4) Payment on application will be accepted in Silver (local currency) at the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation's current selling T.T. rate on London and will bear interest from date of payment, or in Sterling by T.T. or Demand Draft on London. Interest on payments made in Sterling will only accrue from the date on which the relative remittances are received by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, London.

The cost of all telegrams involved through payment by Sterling T.T. shall be paid by the applicant.

Payment will be acknowledged by Banker's Receipt pending issue of the Debentures.

In the event of any applicant not being allotted the full amount applied for, the amount over-applied for will be repaid in full, plus interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum from the date payment was received in Shanghai or London to the due date of repayment in Shanghai, as notified to the applicant by special notice from the Council.

(5) The Loan will be redeemed at par on June 30, 1950, but may be redeemed by the Council in whole or in part on June 30, 1930, and/or on any subsequent date or dates on which the half-yearly interest is payable, subject to the Council giving six calendar months' notice in the Municipal Gazette and Public Press of Shanghai. In the event of any partial redemption of the loan the numbers of the Debentures to be redeemed will be decided by drawing. The numbers of such drawn Debentures will be notified in the Municipal Gazette and Public Press of Shanghai not less than three months prior to the date of repayment.

Application forms can be obtained on and after May 1, from the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, No. 12 The Bund, or from the Treasurer and Comptroller, Finance Department, 24B Kiangse Road, to whom all enquiries should be addressed.

KINGMAN & BROS.
How to Preserve the Teeth.

In order to keep the teeth in a good condition scientific precaution must be taken. Through negligence, decay and numerous other affections such as tooth-ache, dental periostitis esteo-periostitis, necrosis of the jaw, etc., may arise. During the process of ingestion, there are settled on the teeth, some deposits of mineral and organic matters, called tartar, which possesses a morbid power of pressing the gum. As an inevitable result of the presence of this tartar, the teeth will become elongated and movable and will, by degrees, absorb away the enamel, leading ultimately to the decay and degeneration of the teeth. The tartar is so hard and resistant to the process of brushing that it cannot be scraped off except with dental instruments specially devised for that purpose.

Dr. KINGMAN offers to the public his service for preserving their teeth at an annual subscription Fee of $10.00 per Head to be paid in advance.

The work to be done by Dr. KINGMAN to the subscribers consists in:—

(1) Cleaning of the teeth quarterly
(2) Filling with gold platinum alloy only, when the teeth present holes.
(3) Inspecting the teeth at any time at the desire of the subscribers.

A Message To Wilson

THE Democratic National Convention now in session in San Francisco has, almost its first act, sent a message of cheer and admiration to President Wilson. It is a fine tribute, an American tribute, of sympathy and recognition to a great leader who is "not only broken in body but heart sick from the knowledge that his political adversaries are savagely attempting to destroy the world's hope of settled peace."

The message is timely and it is sincere. It reveals the heart of that great convention of Democratic leaders, and even more, we believe, it reveals the heart of America, both Democratic and Republican. We believe that nine out of ten Americans are for the League of Nations and the Treaty of Peace. Some of these nine favor the League with reservations, some accept the whole program just as President Wilson brought it back from Versailles. But on a straight out fight for and against the League and Treaty we believe that the country would vote "For."

The Republican Senators have made a fight of unexampled ferocity on President Wilson. They have attempted to destroy him in order to destroy his work. They have, so to speak, not even hesitated "to hit him while he was down" and they have in fact gone too far in all directions. They talked themselves into a fury; they lost self-control of themselves. Their bitter, personal campaign bore fruit at Chicago, where they abandoned their whole program. As near as one can, at this distance, analyse their new program it is this: They wish first to destroy everything that President Wilson did, and then call all the nations together again under Republican auspices, and ask them to agree to pretty much the same program that President Wilson already has induced them to agree to. What is the difference between "an association of nations" and a League of Nations? They want an International Court of Justice. What would the League of Nations be but that?

Furthermore, Americans generally will resent the fact that a small body of Republican Senators has attempted to drag down a man of the stature of President Wilson, whose fame spread to the ends of the earth; to sneer at him, to detract from his fame as a statesman and to hold up his deeds as President to universal scorn.

The result, on the Democratic Party at least, we have before us today in the telegram which tells of the message of "cheer and admiration" to the President, in the fact that Wilson followers are in control of the convention and that "every mention of the League of Nations was greeted by prolonged cheers."

Future Of The Submarine

Admiral Mayo's Idea Is That Its Value In Coming Wars Will Be Secondary To That Of The Battleship

President Wilson's message to Admiral W. S. Sims at the height of the submarine crisis, made public at a recent hearing of the Senate committee investigating the Sims charges, has reawakened interest in the submarine and raised the question whether in a future war the submersible will at any time hold a place on which the issue of the war itself seems to turn, as it did in the recent contest. The lessons learned from the submarine during the war and the part it will play in future wars is already the subject of much difference of opinion among the navy men of the world.

Admiral Henry T. Mayo, who commanded the Atlantic Fleet during the war, and whose long and successful career gives value to his opinion on this point, was asked in Washington the other day what part he thought the submarine would play in future naval warfare.

"It is a difficult question even to attempt to answer," the Admiral said. "The data from which analysts will draw the lessons of the submarine are not yet fully brought together and we cannot tell how far the submarine will be developed from its present stage of improvement. Talk is already heard of a battleship submarine. Our new cruiser submarines will have surface displacement of 2,000 tons. It is a matter of speculation how far this development can go before the limit is reached, but there is, of course, a limit in this as in all things. Some of the more enthusiastic advocates of the submarine think that before this limit is reached this form of navy craft will have attained such an offensive power as to make it the supreme weapon in naval warfare —that is, the new ruler of the ocean.

OUTLAWING THE SUBMARINE

"At the other extreme are those who predict that the submarine will be outlawed by an agreement of the nations and that we are to see it disappear from the navies of the world. Here, I think, one outstanding lesson of the war may be stated: that the submarine has come to stay as a result of what it has showed it could do. Whatever agreements may be made between nations aimed to prevent in the future the use of the submarine against merchant vessels, it has shown its utility, in other important ways that will insure its continued use and active development.

"The improvement made in the submarine during the war was most marked. The shape the conflict took on the sea forced this development. At the beginning of the war submarines were largely an experiment. They were small, the limit of ours being about 500 tons. No one could say with any certainty of what they were capable. There was much difference of opinion as to their possibilities. This difference centered chiefly on what their size should be.

"Ours were all small, built for use in the defense of our coasts principally, as this, according to the generally accepted opinion, was the limit of their real utility. It should be said, however, that Admiral Grant, who, about that time, had under him the submarine force, and many others were strong advocates of the development of the large size, and events have since shown that they were right.

"Germany was not much ahead of other nations in the submarine at the outbreak of the war, but the situation of Germany, under blockade, forced her to concentrate on this type of craft, and with this the other nations in the war were drawn into the competition. Consequently there was a rapid development. Before the end of the war we had the 1,000-ton submarine with a sailing radius of something like 20,000 miles and capable of staying out three months. Some of the latest built carried twelve-inch guns.

USES OF THE SUBMERSIBLE

"Three important uses of the submarine were included in the development that followed, though only one commanded the attention of the public. These were as an offensive weapon, for scout work and in mine laying. Owing to its ability to hide under water the submarine has become the most valuable scout a navy can have. What we call fleet submarines, which have a large cruising radius and are of good speed and endurance, can be sent at a great distance to obtain information of the enemy, and with radio equipment this can be regularly communicated. Here they serve the fleet in a most important way. That is a lesson we have from the war.

"As a weapon of offense against warships we are on less certain ground as to what the capabilities of the submarine are. They did not take part in any fleet engagement. Had the German fleet come out in the Spring of 1918, as was threatened, we should know much more on this subject undoubtedly. Some warships were sunk by German submarines. It is said that some sixty warships of the British Navy were torpedoed, but these losses were chiefly in the earlier days of the war before later means of defense were developed.

"The fact that the Germans centered their use of the submarine in the sinking of merchant shipping and the fact that the protection of this shipping became the supreme necessity of the Allies stimulated the development of a defense from the submarine, and here we have the second phase of this activity of the war: First, the development of the submarine as a weapon; second, the development of weapons against the submarine, though, while this second phase was under way, the improvement of the submarine continued to the end of the war.

"The result was that the anti-submarine work won. The same pressure that at the beginning of the war forced the development of the submarine by one side forced the developed counter-weapon by the other side. The victory of the anti-submarine weapons did not put the submarine out of the field, but it did set a limit on what the submarine, as then developed, could do, and showed that the predictions of some that the submarine would win the war were wrong."

ANTI-SUBMARINE WEAPONS

"What do you consider the most important weapons in the anti-submarine work?" the Admiral was asked.

"The destroyers and the depth charges," was the answer. "It is contended by some that the greatest enemy of the submarine will be found to be the submarine itself, and that engagements of flotillas of submarines will be a prominent feature of naval warfare of the future. It is asserted that statistics show that of the submarines destroyed twenty were destroyed by submarines, but this does not establish the contention. Like some of the other questions hinging on the submarine, it is a lesson of the war not yet seen in clear enough outline to be read."

"What part do you think the submarine will play in naval warfare of the future?" the Admiral was asked again and explicitly.

"A part of importance—that is one lesson of the war; the extent of this will be determined by the future development of the submarine. But, in my opinion, whatever improvements are made the part played by the submarine will not be the one of chief importance. That chief importance will be held by the battleship, as it has been in the past. The strength of the fleet will rest on the strength of the battleships, and our first aim should be to continue to build the most powerful ones possible.

BATTLESHIP PERSISTENT

"We have heard the battleship doomed before. When the torpedo was invented assertions were made that it was only a question of developing the destructive power of the torpedo until it would be possible to blow the biggest battleship out of the water. But weapons against the torpedo were found—means of protection—and while the torpedo continues to have a place of no small importance, the battleship remains in its position of first place.

"We have the same lesson out of this war with regard to the submarine. Weapons against it were developed with increasing vigor as it became the more menacing. The cordon was strengthened to protect the large ships of the fleet from attack and we were able by the convoy system to transport our troops to France without the loss of a single ship, though here, too, it should be kept in mind that the Germans were employing their submarines chiefly to destroy merchant shipping.

"But while maintaining that the battleship will continue to hold first place, I would not thereby lessen the importance of our development of the submarine to the fullest extent possible as a necessary protection. We should have a large force of submarines —especially on account of the length of our coast line. A submarine flotilla will be an indispensable part of our fleet, but this part I consider to be supplementary to the battleship units, just as the airship squadron will be—both powerful adjuncts. We had both in the 1919 maneuvers of the Atlantic Fleet commanded by me, and the fine work done by each gave a better understanding of what this service can be made.

"I have confidence that we shall be able more than to hold up our end in submarine development. In this the greatest factor for success is the personnel, and here our unusual adaptability will stand us in good stead. Submarine work requires high adaptability, for without this the cramped, restricted life soon weighs on officers and men. Opportunity for recreation of any kind is closely limited. On account of the work there is an extra inducement for the enlisted men, $5 more a month and $1 for each submersion up to $15, but the officers receive no extra pay for the sacrifices they make and all the more credit is due them for the splendid record they made during the war."

All told, the navy has 100 submarines. Seventy-six are in commission, and it is expected that this number will be kept in commission during the year. Twenty-three submarines are now being built or are to be built. Nine fleet submarines—the big ones of 2,000 tons displacement referred to in the interview—are yet to be commenced. The estimated cost of these is about $3,000,000 apiece. Most of this class of vessels now in service are 800-ton submarines. In addition to the nine fleet submarines already authorized the General Board of the navy recommended for 1921 six additional submarines, and in this connection it said:

"The recent war has demonstrated the enormous value of submarines to any navy, and in certain directions they can perform services, both offensive and defensive, not possible with other types of vessels. Because of the large number of submarines built or authorised during the war the General Board believes it is not advisable, for the immediate future, to lay down more submarines in considerable numbers, but we certainly should proceed with their development by building type or pilot submarines of certain classes. The 'fleet' submarines now being designed will be the only ones on which the lessons of the last war can be applied; their design, development and building will serve to cover that general class. For new types the General Board recommends that at least two of each of the following general characteristics be appropriated for in the next bill:

"A very long radius submarine, with heavy armament and the longest practical radio sending range; surface and submerged speeds to be moderate, with considerable submerged radius; four bow and two stern tubes, fifteen long 21-inch torpedoes, two 6-inch guns, and one anti-aircraft gun; about 300 feet in length and 2,000 tons surface displacement and about fourteen knots surface speed.

"A long radius mine layer, generally modeled after ex-German submarine U-117.

"A general purpose submarine of moderate size, between 200 and 250 feet length, and corresponding surface displacements of 800 to 1,000 tons; to be the best combination that we can evolve as a result of our prospective experiences with different designs of S class AA-1 and U-111."

"Sinn Fein"

(Hongkong Telegraph)

Mr. Herbert Moore Pim, the author of "Unconquerable Ulster," has just published another informing little book on Irish affairs entitled "Sinn Fein." He was a member of the National Council of that organisation, and the founder of the Sinn Fein clubs, but resigned his connection with that body in 1918. He was interned in England along with others believed to have been concerned with the Dublin rebellion. Mr. Pim is engaged on a larger work dealing with the revolutionary body whose name is now a household word, and in this little book treats his subject in a rather superficial manner. It is well, however, that the British public should be told something of the origin of Sinn Fein.

Originally started twenty years ago to organise Irishmen on the methods pursued by Hungary in her struggles with Austria—boycotting Austrian goods, fostering Hungarian industries, and generally acting on the principles of passive resistance—it was a complete failure, perhaps because it would have nothing to do with violence and outrage. It had been practically extinct when the Irish Volunteers were started by the extremists. Then the late John Redmond became associated with the movement, but the wild men repudiating his authority and the force melting away to less than five thousand, it was the Nationalist leader who nicknamed the residue "Sinn Fein" in order to pour ridicule on it. At this time Mr. Pim took in hand the re-organisation of the Volunteers. Then came the Rebellion, "the work of a very few persons" of which he had no foreknowledge. The suppression of the revolt, the execution of some of the leaders, and the internment of many others reduced Nationalist Ireland to "apathy and chaos." Released from prison, Mr. Pim started to revive Sinn Fein, and to establish the clubs. He and his colleagues seem to have followed, more or less, the original idea of Arthur Griffith till the advent of De Valera and his policy of tyranny and outrage. The immediate and astonishing success of that person convinced Mr. Pim that he had been "devoting himself to the support of a people who, to put it mildly were unfit for self-government."

The rest of the book is a recital of the author's reasons for the conviction; and his comments on the character of the Nationalists of Ireland are far more condemnatory than could be found in the speeches and writings of any life-long Unionist. The American "delegater" who went to Ireland at the instigation of President Wilson and with the permission of Mr. Lloyd George "undid in three days a considerable part of the good work which Viscount French had accomplished because he was an Irishman and knew all the tricks of the Nationalists." It would do so-called Unionist M.P.'s good to read this little book before they start talking about the Home Rule Bill in Committee.

The Stars In Summer

By ST. ARGA ZER
(Shanghai College)

Moon's Phases for July.

Full Moon: July 1, 4:27 p.m.
Last Quarter: July 9, 12:52 p.m.
New Moon: July 16, 4:11 a.m.
First Quarter: July 23, 3:06 a.m.
Full Moon: July 31, 7:05 a.m.

Notice that there are two full moons in July.

Winter is over, and we can no longer see majestic Orion and his Dogs, now sunk beneath the western skies with the sun. Aldebaran, Capella, and the Twins are obscured in like manner in the sun's bright rays. The east now brings us the stars of summer, and though there is not such a dazzling array of them, yet these are also interesting, and the warmer weather will induce us to stay out longer and view more leisurely the brilliants of the sky. Regulus at the end of the handle of the Sickle may now be seen hastening down the western skies soon after sunset. His two bright companion planets, Jupiter and Saturn, will arrange themselves about the 8th of this month at equal distances on both sides, the three forming almost a straight line. Arcturus is almost right overhead at sunset, and you will see it best by lying flat on your back on the lawn. Bright white Spica, with the red planet Mars so very near it, is swinging toward the west, setting before midnight. In the northeast we can see beautiful blue Vega, the finest object in all the summer skies. It is often remarked that Vega approaches nearer to the idea of a "diamond in the sky" than any other star.

CYGNUS THE SWAN

Coming up soon after Vega, and just below it, is the beautiful constellation of the Swan. With a little imagination one may almost see the huge bird with its long neck and its wide wings spread out flying upwards towards the south. This group is also known as the Northern Cross, with its longer end pointing upward, and its head end pointing downward to the left. The star at the head end of the Cross, but marking the tail of the Swan, is one of the faintest of all the first magnitude stars. Its name is Deneb, meaning tail. The star in the middle of the Cross is a second magnitude star, while the three end stars are third magnitude stars. The one at the long end of the Cross (Beta Cygni) is one of the most beautiful double stars in the heavens, and may be distinguished with a small telescope of two or three inch aperture. The two component stars are colored yellow and blue.

This is how this group looks early in the evening as we look toward the northeast. To help identify these stars we may recall that Vega, Deneb, and the North Star make a right angled triangle with the right angle at Deneb. We shall see this constellation all through the summer and autumn months, rising higher and higher, passing each night directly overhead, and not leaving us till late in the year, when as it sinks in the west the Cross will have its head end pointing more nearly upward. The Swan lies in the heart of the Galaxy, or Milky Way, which adds such a glory to the skies of summer. Right south of Deneb is the Coal-sack, a small empty space in the Milky Way, black as a coal mine, and devoid of stars!

A little southwest of the Coal-sack is a faint star, just visible to the naked eye, that has no name but only a number, being known as 61 Cygni, or the 61st of the Swan, which is of peculiar interest in being the first star whose distance was measured by means of its parallax. It was at one time thought to be our nearest star but since then the distances of other stars have been measured which are nearer, notably Sirius and Alpha Centauri. The latter may be seen at this season in south China, a very bright first magnitude star just above the southern horizon. Though Sirius is only a little nearer than 61 Cygni yet it gives us nearly 800 times as much light. Again, Deneb right in the neighborhood of 61 Cygni, gives us fifty times as much light though it is at least fifty times as far away. This illustrates how little we can judge distances by brightness.

Measuring the distances of stars is indeed one of the greatest triumphs of the science of Astronomy, which for centuries has engaged the attention of those who have studied the heavens. It is now about eighty years ago that Bessel, a German astronomer after years of strenuous and patient labor, first determined the distance of 61 Cygni; while almost at the same time Henderson, a Scottish astronomer in South Africa, measured the distance to Alpha Centauri, and Struve, a Russian astronomer at Pulkove near Petrograd, measured the distance to Vega. At a meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society of Great Britain in 1840, Sir John Herschel presided and said in his discourse: "Gentlemen of the Royal Astronomical Society—I congratulate you and myself that we have lived to see the great and hitherto impassable barrier to our excursion into the siderial universe, that barrier against which we have chafed so long and so vainly almost simultaneously overleaped at three different points. It is the greatest and most glorious triumph which practical astronomy has ever witnessed."

ALTAIR THE EAGLE

If we now let our eyes sweep along the Milky Way southward, we shall see a bright white star of the first magnitude, near the edge of the Milky Way. This is Altair. It is the middle one of three stars in a straight line, which points roughly to Vega. Altair, Vega, and Deneb form a triangle of which the sharpest angle is at Altair. The name of this constellation suggests another bird, Aquila, or the Eagle. Altair marks the heart, the three stars in a row are all in the body, the tail is off to the northwest or upwards, while the beak almost touches a bright star below it, or eastward. Now do you see the Eagle? It takes some imagination, does it not? Only a short distance to the northeast of Altair lies a small diamond shaped cluster, known as the Dolphin, or "Job's Coffin," though hardly resembling either.

A CHINESE LEGEND

The Chinese have a beautiful story, found also with slight variations in Japan and Korea, of a goat-herd (Vega) living on one side of the river, in whose waves silvery fishes are sporting (the Milky Way) and a spinning maiden (Altair) who lives on the other side: and how this love-sick couple look across that wide and beautiful river without being able to reach their arms across. Only once a year, on the seventh night of the seventh moon, the magpies are said to congregate at the crossing point and form a bridge over which the lovers are enabled to cross. "All the world loves a lover;" and even children may be seen chasing after a magpie on that day, urging it not to shirk its duty but to help form a bridge for the lovers in the sky. Altair is a white star, and therefore in an early stage of its existence. It is one of the nearest stars, being only fourteen "light years" away. It actually sends abroad about twelve times as much light as the sun, though we receive ninety billion times as much light from the sun as from Altair.

ANTARES THE SCORPION

Going still farther southward along the Milky Way, but on the opposite side of it, we shall see another remarkable constellation. We are attracted first of all by a fiery red star, resembling Mars, called Antares, the name meaning that it is similar to Mars. It is the reddest star visible to the naked eye, and because of this it has long been known to the Chinese as the Great Fire. Look for it almost straight south about nine o'clock in the early part of July, about one-third the way up from the horizon to the zenith. There are three other stars belonging to this constellation of the second magnitude and a full dozen of about the third magnitude, making altogether a very striking group all through the summer. That bright star above and to the right of Antares represents the head of the Scorpion; you see its claws farther off to the sides; to the left and below is a bright star marking the end of its body; and this is followed by irregular and crooked line of small stars representing the tail, which turns upward and ends in a pair of bright stars about one degree apart. Thus the outlines of a huge Scorpion are well suggested to a person of vivid imagination, rather better than most other constellations.

WILL IT STING?

This is the Scorpion that stung Orion, and from which Orion is fleeing so successfully to this day that they are never seen in the sky at the same time. When Orion has set the Scorpion comes up in the east; after the Scorpion sets in the west Orion appears again. The color of Antares indicates that it is an old star whose fires are almost burned out and whose light is waning. Yet even now it is one of the five brightest of all stars whose light giving power has been measured, and six hundred times as bright as our sun. What an enormous giant it must be whose dying embers are still so brilliant! It is one of the remote stars whose light has to travel 112 years to reach us. But the dying giant is not alone, for he has a youthful companion distinguishable with a small telescope, of a bright green color in sharp contrast to the fiery red of the major star.

Two Brains Inside Each Head

This Is About You And The Machine Inside You

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

This is about your brain.

A rich boy inherits an automobile, orders the chauffeur to bring it around, takes little interest in the machinery.

A man who has worked for the money to buy an automobile trys to know about it—it interests him.

Whatever of you amounts to anything is the mysterious power, working through the brain. What actually does the work, spul, as some tell you, will, as others say, Chemical Reaction as materialists believe, we cannot know. But we can know about the machine that lives in the dark inside the skull, receiving information of the outside world through one set of nerves, and through another set issuing orders obeyed by muscles and bones.

Read among many good books on the subject, "Brain and Personality," by W. H. Thomson, who understands his subject. It is published by Dodd, Mead & Co.

Aristotle decided that the brain had nothing to do with thought, that it was a refrigerating plant to cool off the blood.

One man, Alcmaen, who lived before Plato or Aristotle, taught that the mind was in the brain. He based his belief on discovery that total blindness resulted if you cut the optic nerve leading from the eyes to the brain. Otherwise men scouted the theory until the great Greek, Galen, physician to Marcus Aurelius, revived and proved it.

Broca, French scientist, died in 1881, was first to understand the human thinking machine. The part of your brain with which you speak is called "Broca's convolution." He located speech in the rear part of the third frontal convolution. Injury to that part destroys speech absolutely.

When that Frenchman successfully explored the brain and taught how it worked, he did more important exploring than a thousand Pearys, Livingstones or Stanleys.

As you possess two eyes, ears, two hands and two feet, so you possess Two Brains. Each brain is complete, separate and can, if necessary, do all the work of thinking, just as one eye, if necessary, can do the work of seeing.

If you are right-handed, the convolution in your Left brain does the talking. If you are left-handed, it is the Right-Handed convolution that talks. If the talking part of the brain is destroyed in a young child, the other brain can be taught to talk. In a man of fifty, injury to "Broca's convolution" destroys speech for life. The brain becomes hardened with age, and, like an old dog, cannot be taught new tricks.

When you put on another man's hat and it falls over your ears you are indignant. You know the other man concludes that he is your mental superior. That does not follow.

A brain of normal size is usually better than the brain abnormally small. Idiots And half-witted persons usually have small heads and lighter brains than normal human beings.

Helmholtz, one of the world's most learned men, had a brain weighing only forty-five ounces. Thirteen men that died in an English poorhouse had brains weighing more than sixty ounces. Webster's brain weighed a little over fifty-five ounces.

Dollinger, learned student and expounder of theology, had a brain weighing thirty-seven ounces.

Among five races—Swedish, Bavarian, Hessian, Bohemian and English—the English are found to have the smallest average brain weight, the Bohemian the highest.

Size of head and weight of the brain do not always go together. A brain like an orange, may have a thick covering.

A small saw, of the right kind of steel, will cut through a big iron bar. A small brain, of the right material, is more important than mere brain bulk.

Women's brains, as well as their skulls, are smaller than men's, on the average.

As time passes, the substance of which your brain is made "sets," becomes, mentally speaking, hard, like concrete. After a certain age a man cannot change his opinions. He thinks he doesn't want to, but in reality he cannot.

Between twenty and thirty and forty educated men receive new ideas easily; after that, with difficulty or not at all. Unless an opening has been made into the brain, through which the truth may go, in youth, the truth cannot get in later. Hence the importance of having what is contemptuously called, "a smattering of general information and general opinions." Each "smattering" may leave a hole to let in the light later. Uneducated men rarely accept a new thought after twenty-five. Beyond that, age they can hate, but think with difficulty. That makes mobs so dangerous.

The scientific world is puzzled by the fact that we should have two complete brains, as we have two feet and two hands. The second brain seems unnecessary, still we have it, ready in case of accident to the speaking brain to take up the work of speech, thought and perception if the accident comes early enough.

Nature does her big work in spherical form. The suns and planets are spheres, water in the brook or the blood in your veins rolls in round drops. Perhaps there is a good reason, to be developed later, for a spherical brain with its two hemispheres. Some day we may use one brain for our little work of thought and organisation on this earth the other for exploration and contemplation of the outside universe. "It hath not yet been shown what we shall be."

The two brains that live back of your eyes, above your nose and ears and under your hair, deepening their convolutions, increasing their power as long as you think, deteriorating with dreadful rapidity when you stop thinking are separated by a cleft, and united, at the bottom of the cleft by an interesting bridge called corpus callosum. It is a bridge of white fibres passing from one brain to the other. Information is supposed to travel over this bridge from one brain to the other. There is no certainty as to its use. Men have lived normally without it.

Some day the experiment of transplanting one-half of a very young human brain in the place of one-half of the brain of young chimpanzee may be attempted. Anti-vivisectionists take warning.

Like yourself, your little brother the chimpanzee, has two complete brains. And you would find it difficult to tell the brain of the chimpanzee child from that of a human child.

Feeding Poland's Children

1,200,000 Receive Daily Meal In American Foodstuffs, Says Polish Minister Of Public Health

From Poland, written by the Minister of Public Health, has come a letter to the American people thanking them for their help in saving the children of the Polish Republic from starvation the past year. The letter has been addressed jointly to the National Allied Relief Committee and the French Heroes Lafayette Memorial Fund, Inc., both of New York. The lives of a million and a quarter children, as well as unnumbered mothers, have been preserved, the Polish Republic's Minister states. Not only have the million and a quarter children been fed, but over half a million have been clothed.

Today, the letter says, "1,200,000 children from infancy to 15 years of age, as well as nursing mothers, receive their daily meal in American foodstuffs. The cost of the foodstuffs which enter this very nourishing meal is approximately 5 cents. The Polish Committee raises all of its expenses for kitchens and administration by special means within the country, so that the American donors' gift goes to the children untouched, in the form of foodstuffs and clothing.

"This winter the American Relief Administration European Children's Fund, with the support of its American donors, will clothe over a half million of Poland's children. The children's relief work, which has been in operation here for over six months, extends to the furthest cities and villages of Poland from Kalisz to Pinsk, and from Minsk to Lwow. The country-wide administration is carried out through two hundred regional committees, under each of which work a number of town and village committees."

One hundred thousand appeals of different kinds, sent into every State, into nearly every county, of the Union, brought the money from many hundreds of pocket-books. The sums that came in and found their way eventually into the hands of the American Relief Administration European Children's Fund, through which they were transmitted into Poland, ranged from a thousand dollars to a few cents. Many prominent New York men and women make up the directorate of these two "war committees" that, now that the war is over, find they cannot stop.

Each child aided received flour, condensed milk, rice, peas, fats, sugar and cocoa, making one substantial meal daily at a cost of 6 cents, or $1.80 per month for each child. Clothing, an equally grave problem was, solved in this way: At a cost of $5 each child received one pair of shoes, two pairs of stockings, 1¾ yards of muslin for undergarments, 1¾ yards of heavy material for outergarments. In each town it was found possible to organise sewing circles of women to make up the garments.

This work of relief must be continued, the committee states. Funds continue to be necessary. It urgently asks every American to send his or her contribution to James A. Blair, Jr., Treasurer, 2 West Forty-fifth Street, New York City.

Only one in five underfed children, it is calculated, has been thus far reached, the total number of little Polish sufferers being 6,500,000.

Flying The Pacific

(From The Hongkong Telegraph)

The preparations of the United States Navy to send two large flying-boats from San Francisco over the Pacific to Manila, and thence to Hongkong, a distance of 7,616 nautical miles, are now practically complete, says the New York correspondent of the Central News.

Although great secrecy has surrounded the project, it is known that the seaplanes will be nearly twice as large as the "N.C.'s" which participated in the Atlantic flight, and the enterprise has been made feasible through the inventive genius of the aeronautical engineer, Edson Gaillaudet, who has succeeded in coupling three Liberty engines to one eighteen-foot propeller. Each machine will have altogether nine engines.

There will be four stops, at Honolulu, Wake Island, Guam, and Manila, the first stage being a distance of 2,091 nautical miles.

M. PAINLEVE SEES FRENCH RECOVERY

Says Bountiful Harvests Cover Fields Year Ago Pitted With Shell Holes

New York, May 28.—Paul Painleve, former French Prime Minister, who welcomed Gen. Pershing's "crusaders of democracy" to the Gallic republic, arrived yesterday by the French liner France, and in line with diplomatic predecessors recently landing here was prepared for the ship news reporters with a typewritten message to the American people. He was met at the pier by Maurice Casenave, French High Commissioner here, and representative of the French Consulate. He is on his way to China as chief of the French Intellectual and Technical Mission and is accompanied by Hain Jou-kia, a learned representative of the Chinese republic.

M. Painleve regretted that he could not stop on his way to the Far East to visit "our beautiful cities," recalled his glorious privilege of greeting the "flower of our youth" when they reached the shores of France and declared that "on May 30 the soldiers, the peasants, the workmen of France, following the example of our Government, will honor the graves of the American boys who fell on our devastated soil."

RESOURCES OF FRANCE

He predicted the speedy recovery of France in these words: "Those that believe she is in the throes of laziness or that the enormous sacrifices she has endured have weakened her know the France of today no better than they knew the France of pre-war days. Her resources are enormous, and in spite of some present difficulties she will surprise the world by the promptitude and vigor of her economic resurrection as she surprised the world by her resistance against the enemy. One must have seen the plains of Flanders and Picardy a year ago, ravaged and covered with shell holes, to appreciate the splendid harvest that covers the fields, with the population already at labor. This year our crop will nearly double and France practically will be able to cover her own needs.

"Promoters are systematically developing the marvellous richness of North and Occidental Africa and in Morocco Kozminski traveled assured that if they give us their confidence and credit they will have no cause for regret. If the world, which, with our allies we saved at the same time we saved ourselves, leaves us to ourselves confronting a Germany that has not felt the burdens of war, we will undertake our task alone. It will be strenuous and take a little longer, but that too we can accomplish.

"Whatever course the United States may decide upon, France will never forgot the powerful and generous assistance America gave us. I am particularly pleased to have this occasion to express to the American press the deep sympathy of our French press and of the French people who realise how important was its co-operation before and during the war."

RETURN FROM CHINA IN OCT.

Other members of the Painleve party are M. Borel, director of sciences of the Normal School of Paris; M. Nadal, chief engineer of the French State Railways; Germain Martin, president of the Council of Ministers, and Abel Bonnard, poet, novelist and journalist. From the Pennsylvania Hotel luncheon at the Lawyers' Club, the party went later to a reception given by the Chinese Consul and then proceeded to Washington, where they hope to meet President Wilson. They will sail from Vancouver for China on June 3 and will be the guests there of the President of the Republic. On their return in October they will visit the chief cities of this country.

Maurice W. Kozminski, director-general in the United States and Canada of the French line, returned with his wife and daughter from a trip of several months, in which he visited Morocco. He said the tying up of the French ships at Havre was due to the radical element, and that the vast majority of workers were opposed to the radicals and were ambitious to work hard and build up their country. The Government's firm measures had broken the strike and within a few days three other ships would arrive here. In Morocco Kozminski travelled with President La Touche of the French line, which has inaugurated an automobile touring route of 12,000 miles from Algiers to Casablanca, controlling the hotels along the way, for the accommodation of thousands of American tourists who are expected to visit the country. For his work here during the war M. Kozminski was made an officer of the Legion of Honor.

Mme. Anna Cairc, mother of the late Gaby Desbys; and the latter's sister, Mme. Fernan Conill, are on their way to Havana. They said that Gaby had given her fortune to the poor of Paris.
